

UP IN MAINE

HOLMAN·F·DAY

E. J. Linscott

UP IN MAINE

WITH THE COMPLIMENTS
OF THE AUTHOR.

“A quiet hillside farm, sir, up in Maine.”

UP IN MAINE

Stories of Yankee Life Told in Verse by

HOLMAN F. DAY

With an Introduction by
C. E. LITTLEFIELD

Boston
Small, Maynard & Company
1900 Copyright, 1900, by Small, Maynard & Company.

(Incorporated.)

Entered at Stationers' Hall.

Rockwell and Churchill Press
Boston, U.S.A.

LC Control Number

2002 328515

TO MY FRIEND
AND FELLOW IN THE CRAFT OF LETTERS
WINFIELD M. THOMPSON TO WHOM I AM INDEBTED FOR MORE THAN ONE OF THE STORIES TOLD HEREIN
THIS VOLUME IS DEDICATED

PREFACE

I don't know how to weave a roundelay,
I couldn't voice a sighing song of love ;
No mellow lyre that on which I play ;
I plunk a strident lute without a glove.

The rhythm that is running through my stuff
Is not the whisp of maiden's trailing gown ;
The metre, maybe, gallops rather rough,
Like river-drivers storming down to town.

—It's more than likely something from the wood,
Where chocking axes scare the deer and moose ;
A homely rhyme, and easy understood
—An echo from the weird domain of Spruce.

Or else it's just some Yankee notion, dressed
In rough-and-ready "Uncle Dudley" phrase ;
Some honest thought we common folks suggest,
—Some tricky mem'ry-flash from boyhood's days.

I cannot polish off this stilted rhyme
With all these homely notions in my brain.
A sonnet, sir, would stick me every time ;
Let's have a chat 'bout common things in Maine.

HOLMAN F. DAY.

CONTENTS

	Page
ROUND HOME :
Aunt Shaw's Pet Jug	3
Old Boggs's Slarnt	6
Cy Nye, Prevaricator	8
Uncle Benjy and Old Crane	11
"Plug"	13
The Song of the Harrow and Plow	15
Hooray for the Season of Fairs	17
Had a Set of Double Teeth	20
Grampy's Lullaby	23
Hoskins's Cow	27
An Old Stun' Wall	31
The Stock in the Tie-up	35
Ephrum Wade's Stand-by in Haying	39
Resurrection of Ephrum Way	41
Look out for your Thumb	44
The Triumph of Modest Maria	46
Son has got the Deed	48
An Idyl of Cold Weather	52
Busted the "Test your Strength"	55
"When a Man gets Old"	57
I've got them Calves to Veal	59
The Off Side of the Cow	61
The Lyric of the Buck-saw	63
Mister Keazle's Epitaph	66
Plain Old Kitchen Chap	69

	Page
Takin' Comfort	73
Ephrum kept Three Dogs	74
Lay of Dried-apple Pie	76
Only held his Own	78
Grampy sings a Song	80
Uncle Micajah Strout	83
The True Story of a Kicker	87
Zek'l Pratt's Harrycane	89
Those Pickles of Marm's	92
"The Man I knew I Killed"	94
'LONG SHORE:
Cruise of the "Nancy P."	99
Tale of the Sea-faring Man	101
Cap'n Nutter of the "Puddentame"	107
Good-by, Lobster	109
Cure for Homesickness	112
On the Old Coast Tub	114
Tale of the Kennebec Mariner	117
DRIVE, CAMP, AND WANGAN:
The Law 'gainst Spike-sole Boots	123
The Chap that swings the Axe	126
The Song of the Woods' Dog-watch	129
Fiddler cured the Camp	132
The Song of the Saw	137
Down the Trail with Gum Packs	139
Rear o' the Drive	142
Matin Song of Pete Long's Cook	144

CONTENTS

xi

	Page
Off for the Lumber Woods	147
Here's to the Stout Ash Pole	150
Mister What's-his-name	153
Ha'nts of the Kingdom of Spruce	156
The Hero of the Coonskin Cap	159
A Hail to the Hunter	162
HOSSES :
Them Old Razoos at Topsham Track	167
To Him who driv' the Stage	174
He backed a Blamed Old Horse	176
B. Brown — Hoss Orator	181
"Jest a Lift"	185
Bart of Brighton	188
GOIN' T' SCHOOL :
The Pail I lugged to School	195
The Paddywhacks	198
That Maybasket for Mabel Fry	200
The Mystic Band	204
At the Old "Gool"	207

INTRODUCTION

ABOUT three thousand years ago the "Preacher" declared that "of making many books there is no end." This sublimely pessimistic truism deserves to be considered in connection with the time when it was written; otherwise it might accomplish results not intended by its author.

It must be remembered that in the "Preacher's" time books were altogether in writing. It should also be borne in mind that if the handwriting which we have in these days, speaking of the period prior to the advent of the female typewriter, is to be accepted as any criterion, — and inasmuch as all concede that history repeats itself, that may well be assumed, — it is easy to understand how, by reason of its illegibility, he was also led to declare that "much study is a weariness of the flesh." It is quite obvious that this was the moving cause of his delightfully doleful utterance as to books. Had he lived in this year nineteen hundred, at either the closing of the nineteenth or the dawning of the twentieth century, — as to whether it is closing or dawning I make no assertion,

— he might well have made the same criticism, but from an optimistic standpoint.

A competent litterateur informs me that there are now extant 3,725,423,201 books; that in America and England alone during the last year 12,888 books entered upon a precarious existence, with the faint though unexpressed hope of surviving "life's fitful fever." If the conditions of the "Preacher's" time obtained to-day, the vocabulary of pessimism would be inadequate for the expression of similar views.

A careful examination by the writer, of all these well-nigh innumerable monuments of learning, discloses the fact that the work now being introduced to what I trust may be an equally innumerable army of readers has no parallel in literature. If justification were needed, that fact alone justifies its existence. This fact, however, is not necessary, as the all-sufficient fact which warrants the collection of these unique sketches in book form is that no one can read them without being interested, entertained, and amused, as well as instructed and improved. "The stubborn strength of Plymouth Rock" is nowhere better exemplified than on the Maine farm, in the Maine woods, on the Maine coast, or in the Maine workshop. From them the author of "Up in Maine" has drawn his inspiration. Rugged independence, singleness of purpose, unswerving integrity, philosophy adequate for all occasions, the great realities of life, and a cheerful disregard of conventionalities, are here found in all their native strength and vigor. These peculiarities as delineated may be rough, perhaps uncouth, but they are characteristic, picturesque, engaging, and lifelike. His subjects are rough diamonds. They have the inherent qualities from which great characters are developed, and out of which heroes are made.

Through every chink and crevice of these rugged portrayals glitters the sheen of pure gold, gold of standard weight and fineness, "gold tried in the fire." Finally it should be said that this is what is now known as a book with a purpose, and that purpose, as the author confidentially informs me, is to sell as many copies as possible, which he confidently expects to do. To this most worthy end I trust I may have, in a small degree, contributed by this introduction.

C. E. LITTLEFIELD.

WASHINGTON, D.C., March 17, 1900.

'ROUND HOME

AUNT SHAW'S PET JUG

Now there was Uncle Elnathan Shaw,
— Most regular man you ever saw !
Just half-past four in the afternoon
He'd start and whistle that old jig tune,
Take the big blue jug from the but'ry shelf
And trot down cellar, to draw himself
Old cider enough to last him through The winter ev'nin'. Two quarts would do.
— Just as regular as half-past four Come round, he'd tackle that cellar door,
As he had for thutty years or more.

And as regular, too, as he took that jug Aunt Shaw would yap through her old cross mug,

“Now, Nathan, for goodness' sake take care !
You allus trip on the second stair ;
It seems as though you were just possessed
To break that jug. It's the very best
There is in town and you know it, too,
And 'twas left to me by my great-aunt Sue.
For goodness' sake, why don't yer lug
A tin dish down, for ye'll break that jug ?”
Allus the same, suh, for thirty years,
Allus the same old twits and jeers
Slammed for the nineteenth thousand time
And still we wonder, my friend, at crime.

But Nathan took it meek's a pup
And the worst he said was "Please shut up."
You know what the Good Book says befell
The pitcher that went to the old-time well;
Wal, whether 'twas that or his time had come,
Or his stiff old limbs got weak and numb
Or whether his nerves at last giv' in To Aunt Shaw's everlasting chin —
One day he slipped on that second stair,
Whirled round and grabbed at the empty air
And clean to the foot of them stairs, ker-smack,
He bumped on the bulge of his humped old back
And he'd hardly finished the final bump
When old Aunt Shaw she giv' a jump
And screamed downstairs as mad's a bug
"Dod-rot your hide, did ye break my jug?"

Poor Uncle Nathan lay there flat
Knocked in the shape of an old cocked hat,
But he rubbed his legs, brushed off the dirt
And found after all that he warn't much hurt.
And he'd saved the jug, for his last wild thought
Had been of that; he might have caught
At the cellar shelves and saved his fall,
But he kept his hands on the jug through all.
And now as he loosed his jealous hug
His wife just screamed, "Did ye break my jug?"

Not a single word for his poor old bones
Nor a word when she heard his awful groans,
But the blamed old hard-shelled turkle just Wanted to know if that jug was bust.
Old Uncle Nathan he let one roar
And he shook his fist at the cellar door ;
“ Did ye break my jug ? ” she was yellin’ still.
“ No, durn yer pelt, but I swow I will.”
And you’d thought that the house was a-going to fall
When the old jug smashed on the cellar wall.

OLD BOGGS'S SLARNT

Old Bill Boggs is always sayin' that he'd like to but he carn't;
 He hain't never had no chances, he hain't never got no slarnt.
 Says it's all dum foolish tryin', 'less ye git the proper start,
 Says he's never seed no op'nin' so he's never had no heart.
 But he's chawed enough tobacker for to fill a hogset up
 And has spent his time a-trainin' some all-fired kind of pup;
 While his wife has took in washin' and his children hain't been larnt 'Cause old Boggs is allus whinin' that he's never got no slarnt.

Them air young uns round the gros'ry hadn't oughter done the thing!
 Now it's done, though, and it's over, 'twas a cracker-jack, by jing.
 Boggs, ye see, has been a-settin' twenty years on one old plank,
 One end h'isted on a saw hoss, t'other on the cistern tank.
 T'other night he was a-chawin' and he says, "I vum-spt-ooo —

Here I am a-owin' money — not a gol darn thing to do!

'Tain't no use er buckin' chances, ner er fightin' back at Luck,

— Less ye have some way er startin', feller's sartin to be stuck.

Needs a slarnt to git yer going" — then them young uns give a carnt,

— Plank went up an' down old Boggs went — yas, he got it, got his slarnt.

Course the young uns shouldn't done it — sent mine off along to bed —

Helped to pry Boggs out the cistern — he warn't more'n three-quarters dead.

Didn't no one 'prove the actions, but when all them kids was gone,

Thunder mighty! How we hollered! Gab'rel couldn't heered his horn.

CY NYE, PREVARICATOR

Cy

Nye

Thunder, how he'll lie!

Never has to stop and think — never has to try.

Says he had a settin' hen that acted clean possessed;

Says a kag o' powder couldn't shake her off her nest;

Didn't mind a flannel rag tied around her tail;

Ev'ry now and then he'd take 'er, souse 'er in a pail;

Never had the least effect — feathers even friz;

Then she set and pecked the ice, but 'tended right to biz.

'Peared to care for nothin' else 'cept to set and set;

Didn't seem to care a tunket what she drunk or et.

Cy he said he got so mad he thought he'd use 'er ha'ash,

So he went to feedin' on 'er hemlock sawdust mash.

Hen she gobbled down the stuff, reg'lar as could be;

"Reely seemed to fat 'er up," Cy says he to me.

Shows the power of the mind when it gets a clutch.

Hen imagined it was bran — helped 'er just as much.

Then she hid her nest away — laid a dozen eggs;
'Leven chickens that she hatched all had wooden legs,

T'other egg it wouldn't hatch — solid junk o' wood,

Hen's a-wrasslin' with it yet — thinks the thing is good.

Thunder, how he'll lie!

But he's dry,
— That Cy.

Cy

Nye

Tells another lie:

Claims to be the strongest man around here;
this is why:

Says he bought a side o' beef up to Johnson's store, Tucked it underneath his arm — didn't mind it more

Than a pound o' pickled tripe; sauntered down the road,

Got to ponderin' Bible texts — clean forgot his load.

All to once he chanced to think he meant to get some meat,

Hustled back to Johnson's store t'other end the street,

Bought another side o' beef. The boys commenced to laugh,
— Vummed he hadn't sensed till then he lugged
the other half.

Can't deny

'T he can lie,

— That Cy.

UNCLE BENJY AND OLD CRANE

Once there was a country lawyer and his name was Hiram Crane,
And he had a reputation as the worst old file in Maine.

And as soon's he got a client, why, the first thing that he'd do
Was to feel the critter's pocket and then soak him 'cordin' to.

Well, sir, one day Benjy Butters bought a hoss, and oh, 'twas raw

Way old Benjy he got roasted, and he said he'd have the law.

So he gave the case to Hiram; and then Hiram brought a suit

And got back the hoss and harness and what Benjy gave to boot.

When he met him at the gros'ry Benjy asked him for the bill,

And when Hiram named the figger, it was steeper'n Hobson's hill.

Poor old Benjy hammed and swallowed — bill jest sort of took his breath,

And the crowd that stood a-listenin' thought perhaps he'd choke to death.

But it happened that the squire felt like jokin'
some that day,
And he says, "Now, Uncle Benjy, there won't be a cent to pay
If you'll right here on the instant make me up a nice pat rhyme ;
Hear you're pretty good at them things — give you jest three minutes' time."
And the squire grinned like fury, tipped the crowd a knowing wink, While old Benjy started in, sir, almost 'fore you'd time to think :

"Here you see the petty lawyer leanin' on his corkscrew cane.
Sartin parties call him Gander, other people call him Crane.
Though he's faowl, it's someways daoubtful what he is, my friends, but still You can tell there's hawk about him by the gaul-durned critter's bill."

Crane got mad, he wanted money, but the crowd let on to roar,
And they laughed the blamed old skinflint right square out the gros'ry store.

"PLUG"

For sixty years he had borne the name
Of "Plug" — plain "Plug."
Those many years had his village fame
Published the shame of his old-time game,
Till all the folks by custom came
To call him "Plug."

And so many years at last went by
They hardly knew the reason why;
At least they never stopped to think,
And dropped the old suggestive wink.
And he took the name quite matter-of-fact,
Till most of the folks had forgot his act;
But sometimes a stranger'd wonder at The why of a nickname such as that,
— Of "Plug" — just "Plug."
Then some old chap would shift his quid
And tell the story of what he did.

"He owned ten acres of punkin pine,
'Twas straight and tall, and there warn't a sign
But what 'twas sound as a hickory nut,
And at last he got the price he sut.
They hired him for to chop it down.
He did. — By gosh, it was all unsoun'.
Was a rotten heart in every tree.
But there warn't none there but him to see.

And quick as ever a tree was cut,
He hewed a saplin' and plugged the butt.
— Plugged the butt, sir, and hid away
For about two months, for he'd got his pay.
But there warn't no legal actions took,
They never tackled his pocket-book.
'Twould a-broke his heart, for he's dretful snug;
But he never squirmed when they called him
 'Plug.'

And over the whole of the country-side,
Up to the day that the critter died,
 'Twas 'Plug.'

Till some of the young folks scurcely knew
Which was the nickname, which was the true.
He left five thousand, — putty rich, —
But better less cash than a title sich
 As 'Plug.'”

THE SONG OF THE HARROW AND PLOW

From the acres of Aroostook, broad and mellow in the sun,

Down to rocky York, the chorus of the farmers has begun.

They are riding in Aroostook on a patent sulky
plow,

— They are riding, taking comfort, for they've learned the secret how.

They are planting their potatoes with a whirring new machine,

— Driver sits beneath an awning; slickest thing you've ever seen.

There is not a rock to vex 'em in the acres spreading wide,

So they sit upon a cushion, cock their legs, and smoke and ride.

Gee and Bright go lurching onward in the furrow's mellow steam;

Over there, with clank of whiffle, tugs a sturdy Morgan team.

And the man who rides the planter or who plods
the broken earth

Joins and swells the mighty chorus of the season's budding mirth.

And they've pitched the tune to a jubilant strain.

They are liltng it merrily now.
We wait for that melody up here in Maine,
— 'Tis the song of the harrow and plow.

They are picking rocks in Oxford, and in Waldo blasting ledge,
And they're farming down in Lincoln on their acres set on edge.
Down among the kitchen gardens of the slopes of Cumberland They're sticking in the garden sass as thick as it will stand.
And every nose is sniffing at the scent of furrowed earth,
And every man is living all of life at what it's worth.
Though the farmer in Aroostook sails across a velvet field,
And his mellow, crumbly acres vomit forth a spendthrift yield,
All the rest are just as cheerful on their hillside farms as he,
For there's cosy wealth in gardens and a fortune in a tree.
So they're singing the song of the coming of Spring,
And the song of the empty mow ;
Of the quiver of birth that is stirring the earth,
— 'Tis the song of the harrow and plow.

“There’s a dreadful cheery feelin’ when a day’s work’s done.”

HOORAY FOR THE SEASON OF FAIRS

This is the season for fairs, by gosh, oh, this is the season for fairs ;

They're thicker than spatter,

But what does it matter ?

They scoop up the cash, but who cares ?

From now till October they'll swallow the change,

These state fairs and town fairs and county and grange,

But apples blush brighter arrayed on a plate,

And the cattle look scrumptious in dignified state,

Enthroned in a stall and a-gazing with scorn

On the chaps going by without ribbon or horn.

And the trotters and nags of the blood-royal strain

Are a-furnishing fun for the people of Maine ;

While prouder than princes they prance to the band,

And ogle the ladies arrayed on the stand.

Ah, every exhibit in stall or in hall,

From hooked rug to hossflesh and punkin and all,

Takes on a new meaning, assumes a new light,

And is, for the moment, a wonderful sight.

And people hang over the stuff that's displayed,
They swig up whole barrels of red lemonade,
And hark to the fakirs and tumble to snides,
And treat all the young ones to merry-go rides.
They sit on the grand stand, man crushed against man,

All shouting acclaim to the track's rataplan;
And all the delight is as fresh and as bright
As though the big crowd had not seen that same sight.

And the people flock home with the dust in their eyes,

But with hearts all a-fire with fun and surprise.
The girls are a-humming the tune of the band,
And dads are relating the sights from the stand;
The dames are discussing the fancy work part, While bub hugs the Midway scenes close to his heart.

The palms of the men folks still glow from a grip,

And the women are thinking of lip pressed to lip,

For all of the folks in the loud, happy throng
Have met with the friends "they've not seen for so long."

A hail and salute from the press of the mass, Too brief, as the crowd jammed impatient to pass,

A moment — that's all — to renew the old tie,
A handgrasp, a lip-touch, "Hello," and "Good-by."

Oh, this is the season of fairs, by gosh, the season to lay off your cares,
Each fair is a wonder,
They're thicker than thunder.
Hooray for the season of fairs!

HAD A SET OF DOUBLE TEETH

Oh, listen while I tell to you a truthful little tale

Of a man whose teeth was double all the solid way around ;

He could jest as slick as preachin' bite in two a shingle nail,

Or squonch a moulded bullet, sah, and ev'ry tooth was sound.

I've seen him lift a kag of pork, a-bitin' on the chine,

And he'd clench a rope and hang there like a puppy to a root ;

And a feller he could pull and twitch and yank upon the line,

But he couldn't do no bus'ness with tha double-toothed galoot.

He was luggin' up some shingles, — bunch, sah, underneath each arm, —

The time that he was shinglin' of the Baptist meetin'-house ;

The ladder cracked and buckled, but he didn't think no harm,

When all at once she busted and he started down kersouse.

His head, sah, when she busted, it was jest abreast the eaves ;

And he nipped, sah, quicker'n lightnin', and he gripped there with his teeth,

And he never dropped the shingles, but he hung to both the sheaves,

Though the solid ground was suttinly more'n thirty feet beneath.

He held there and he kicked there and he squirmed, but no one come.

He was workin' on the roof alone — there warn't no folks around.

He hung like death to niggers till his jaws was set and numb,

And he reely thought he'd have to drop them shingles on the ground.

But all at once old Skillins come a-toddlin' down the street.

Old Skil is sort of hump-backed and he allus looks straight down ;

So he never see'd the motions of them Number
'Leven feet,

And he went a-amblin' by him — the goramded blind old clown !

Now this ere part is truthful — ain't a-stretchin' it a mite,—

When the feller see'd that Skillins was a-walkin' past the place,
Let go his teeth and hollered, but he grabbed back quick and tight,
'Fore he had a chance to tumble, and he hung there by the face.

And he never dropped the shingles and he never missed his grip,

And he stepped out on the ladder when they raised it underneath.

And up he went a-flukin' with them shingles on his hip,

— And there's the satisfaction of a havin' double teeth.

GRAMPY'S LULLABY

Your marmy's mixin' cream o' tartar biskit up for tea ;

Fie, deedle, deedle, leetle ba-a-arby !

And I reckon you had better come and roost upon my knee ;

Tumpy, dumpy, deedle, leetle barby !

I s'picion how ye never heard of Ebernezer Cowles.

Tell ye what, he warn't brung up to be afraid of owls.

Reckon that a spryer critter never tallered
boots ;

Allus up to monkey tricks and full o' squirms and scoots.

Once he done a curis thing, I vummy, on a stump :

Set a larder up one end and gin' a mighty jump ;

Run right up the larder, jest as nimble as a monkey,

Balarnced, I sh'd suttin say, a minit — all ahunky ;

Then he straddled out on air and grabbed the pesky larder

And run 'er up another length — another length, suh, farder ;

Skittered up that larder 'fore she had a chance to teeter, Quicker'n any pussy cat — lighter'n a mos-keeter.
Soon's he clambered to the top, grabbed the upper rung, Ketched hisself with t'other hand, and there the critter hung.
Gaffled up his britches' slack and took a resky charnce
And thar' he held hisself right out, arms-length, suh, by his parnts.
Ye ought ter heerd, my barby dear, the cheerins and the howls
The crowd let out when they'd obsarved that trick of Mister Cowles.

Sing'lar thing of which I sing — might not think 'twas true ;
Fie, deedle, deedle, leetle ba-a-arby !
But ye know, my leetle snoozer, grampy wouldn't lie to you,
— To his dumpy, dumpy deedle, leetle
barby.

Hush, I guess that mammy isn't done a-makin' bread,
We ain't at all pertic'lar how she overhears what's said.

Ye're over-young, purraps, to hear of Sam'wel Doubl'yer Strout,

— Weighed about two hundred pounds, and,
chowder, warn't he stout!

Used to work for me one time as sort of extry hand,

— Allus planned to 'gage him when I cleared up any land ;

Once I see him lug a rock with fairly mod'rit ease

So hefty that at ev'ry step he sunk above his knees.

Hain't at all surprised to see the wonder in your eye ;

Fie, deedle, deedle, leetle ba-a-arby !

But ye know your poor old grampy wouldn't tell ye ary lie,

— To his tumpy, dumpy deedle, leetle
barby.

Course ye've never heerd 'em tell of Atha-ni-al Prime,

For he was round a-raisin' Cain so long afore your time.

Used to run the muley saw down to Hopkins mill,

— Allus cuttin' ding-does up — a master curis pill !

Once the chaps that tended sluice stood upon a log,
Got to argyin' this and that, suthin' 'bout a dog.
Clean forgot to start the log a-goin' up the sluice,
But shook their fists and hollered round and spit torbarker juice.
Atha-ni-al heerd the towse and grabbed a pick-pole up,
— Wasn't goin' to stop a mill to fight about a pup,— Tied a rope around the pole and then he let her flam, Speared the end of that air log and yanked her quicker'n Sam.
Log, suh, come right out the bark, he twitched
the thing so quick ;
Fellers never felt the yank, 'twas done so smooth and slick.
Log come out and up the sluice and left behind the bark,
— Fellers thought the log was there and stood and chawed till dark.
Sing'lar things has come to pass when I was young as you ;
Fie, deedle, deedle, leetle ba-a-arby !
And best of all, what grampy sings you bet your life is true,
Tumpy, deedle, dumpy, leetle barby.

HOSKINS'S COW

Hoskins's cow got into the pound and the notice was tacked on the meetin'-house door :

“ Come into my yard, one brindle cow with three white feet, and her shoulders sore,

— Galled by a poke, — and the owner is asked to call at the pound and take her away.”

Well, Hoskins knew she was his all right, but, you see, he hadn't wherewith to pay.

The cow was breachy — she wasn't to blame,
for Hoskins had turned her abroad to roam ;
She had to battle for daily grass, for the bovine cupboard was bare at home.

So Hoskins had hitched on her withered neck a wooden “regalia” — sort of a yoke,

Supposed to keep her from breachy tricks, but the poor old creature employed the “poke”

To rip up fences and let down bars ; her hunger sharpened her slender wits,

And somehow she sneaked through the guarded gates, and gave the garden sass regular fits.

The neighbors pitied her starving state, but at last she stubbornly wouldn't shoo ;

They pounded tattoos on her skinny ribs till it really seemed they would whack 'em through.

But she got so toughened and callous and hard,
and the stiffened frame of her mortised bones Formed such an excellent armor-plate against the broadsides of sticks and stones,
That they "pounded" her then in a different way — in the village pound — whose walls would hold
The breachiest cow that ever strayed — and the notice was posted as I have told.

She stood there a day and she stayed there a night; she cropped the scanty bushes and grass,
And moo-ed and loo-ed in a yearning way, whenever a person chanced to pass.
— She ate the leaves from some alder sprouts for a scanty breakfast the second day,
And munched the twigs for her dinner, alas, and longed, oh, so much, for some meadow hay.
That night she gnawed at her dry old poke, — a painful meal, for the slivers ran In her tongue; so she crouched by the high-barred gate and seemed deserted of God and man.

And Hoskins knew that they had his cow, and Hoskins knew of her solemn fast,

For he'd gone up the highway and looked through the gate in her dumb, reproachful eyes as he passed.

Yet what, may I ask, could the poor man do?
He was right in a place where he couldn't pay,

— He had three dollars, 'tis true enough, and
'twould square the bill, but, you see, that day
The catchers had come and taken his dogs: a hound, a setter, and brindle-pup,

And a man like Hoskins would ne'er endure to have the dog-pound gobble them up,

For he gunned on Sundays behind the hound,
and the bull was entered and backed to fight.

And Hoskins, you see, as a sporting man had a reputation to keep upright.

I wonder, friends, if you've ever thought, while you've stormed at rum as the poor man's curse, There are chaps so built on the mental plan that keeping dogs will warp them worse?

The "two-dog" man may be reclaimed, but I've been compelled, alas, to see

That there doesn't appear to be much hope for the wretched critter condemned to three.

And Hoskins's duty was plain to him: his youngsters wailed for the milk they missed, But Hoskins thought of his poor, poor dogs and gripped his dollars tight in his fist.

He shut his ears to his children's cries, he steeled his heart when he passed the pound,
To the mute appeal in the old cow's eyes; but he smiled at last when his dogs were found.
And he gladly proffered the three lone plunks to sate the greed of the legal hogs,
And proudly he took the highway back, a-leading his licensed, bailed-out dogs.
And they barked and yipped and yapped and yawped at a poor old tottering cow they found Absorbed in a desperate, hungry reach for a thistle outside the village pound.

AN OLD STUN' WALL

If ye only knew the backaches in an old stun' wall!

O, Lordy me,
I'm seventy-three!

— Begun amongst these boulders and I've lived here through it all.

I wasn't quite to bub's age there, when dad commenced to clear

The wust of ninety acres with a hoss team and a steer.

And we've used the stun's for fencin' and we've built around the lot,

O, I've tugged and worked there, sonny, ontill gracious me, I've sot

And fairly groaned o' evenings with the twinges in my back;

Sakes, there warn't no shirkin,' them days; it was tug and lift and sack,

For it needed lots of muscle, lots of gruntin', lots of sand

If a feller calculated for to clear a piece of land.

Bub, it isn't any wonder that our backs has got a hump,

That our arms are stretched and awkward like the handle on a pump,

That our palms are hard and calloused, that we wobble in our gait
— There's the reason right before you 'round the medders in the State.

And I wonder sometimes, sonny, that we've any backs at all

When I figer on the backaches in an Old

Stun'

Wall.

If ye only knew the backaches in an old stun'
wall!

We read of men

Who with a pen

Have pried away the curses that have crushed us in their fall.

I don't begrudge them honor nor the splendor of their name

For an av'rage Yankee farmer hasn't any use for fame,

But the man who lifted curses and the man who lifted stones

Never'll hear a mite of diff'runce in the Heavenly Father's tones.

For I have the humble notion, bub, that when all kinds of men,

The chaps that pried with crowbar and the chaps that pried with pen,

Are waitin' to be measured for the things they've done below

The angel with the girth-chain's bound to give us all fair show.

And the humble man who's tussled with the rocks of stubborn Maine

Won't find that all his labor has been thankless and in vain.

And while the wise and mighty get the glorious credit due

The man who took the brunt of toil will be remembered too.

The man who bent his aching back will earn his crown, my child,

By the acres he made fertile and the miles of rocks he piled.

That ain't my whole religion, for I don't propose to shirk

What my duties are to Heaven,— but the gospel of hard work

Is a mighty solid bed-rock that I've built on more or less ;

I believe that God Almighty has it in his heart to bless

For the good they've left behind them rough old chaps with humped-up backs

Who have gone ahead and smoothed things with the crowbar and the axe.

For if all our hairs are numbered and He notes the sparrow's fall

He understands the backaches in an Old

Stun'

Wall.

THE STOCK IN THE TIE-UP

I'm workin' this week in the wood lot; a hearty old job, you can bet;
I finish my chores with a larntern, and marm has the table all set
By the time I get in with the milkin'; and after I wash at the sink,
And marm sets a saucer o' strainin's for the cat
and the kittens to drink,
Your uncle is ready for supper, with an appetite whet to an edge
That'll cut like a bush-scythe in swale-grass, and couldn't be dulled on a ledge.
And marm, she slats open the oven, and pulls out a heapin' full tin
Of the rippin'est cream-tartar biskit a man ever pushed at his chin.
We pile some more wood on the fire, and open the damper full blare,
And pull up and pitch into supper — and comfort — and taste good — wal, there!
And the wind swooshes over the chimby, and scrapes at the shingles cross grain,
But good double winders and bankin' are mighty good friends here in Maine.
I look 'crost the table to mother, and marm she looks over at me,

And passes another hot biskit and says, " Won't ye have some more tea? "

And while I am stirrin' the sugar, I relish the sound of the storm.

For, thank the good Lord, we are cosy and the stock in the tie-up is warm.

I tell ye, the song o' the fire and the chirruping hiss o' the tea,

The roar of the wind in the chimbly, they sound dreadful cheerful to me.

But they'd harrer me, plague me, and fret me, unless as I set here I knew

That the critters are munchin' their fodder and bedded and comf'table too.

These biskits are light as a feather, but, boy, they'd be heavier'n lead

If I thought that my hosses was shiv'rin', if I thought that my cattle warn't fed.

There's men in the neighborhood 'round me who pray som'w'at louder than me,

They wear better clothes, sir, on Sunday — chip in for the heathen Chinee,

But the cracks in the sides o' their tie-ups are wide as the door o' their pew,

And the winter comes in there a-howlin', with the sleet and the snow peltin' through.

Step in there, sir, ary a mornin' and look at their critters! 'Twould seem As if they were bilers or engines, and all o' them chock full o' steam.
I've got an old-fashioned religion that calkalates
Sundays for rest,
But if there warn't time, sir, on week days to batten a tie-up, I'm blest I'd use up a Sunday or such-like, and let the durned heathen folks go While I fastened some boards on the lintel to keep out the frost and the snow.
I'd stand all the frowns of the parson before I'd have courage to face
The dumb holler eyes o' the critters hooked up in a frosty old place.
And I'll bet ye that in the Hereafter the men who have stayed on their knees And let some poor, fuzzy old cattle stand out in a tie-up and freeze,
Will find that the heat o' the Hot Place is keyed to an extra degree
For the men who forgot to consider that critters have feelin's same's we.

I dasn't go thinkin' o' tie-ups where winter goes whistlin' through.
Where cattle are humped at their stanchions with scarcely the gumption to moo.

But I'm glad for the sake of Hereafter that mine ain't the sin and the guilt,
And I tell you I relish my feelin's when I pull up the big patchwork quilt.
I can laugh at the pelt o' the snowflakes, and grin at the slat o' the storm, And thank the good Lord I can sleep now; the stock in the tie-up is warm.

EPHRUM WADE'S STAND-BY IN HAYING

Ephrum Wade sat down in the shade
And took off his haymaker hat, which he laid On a tussock of grass; and he pulled out the plug
That jealously gagged the old iron-stone jug.
And cocking his jug on his elbow he rigged
A sort of a "horse-up," you know, and he swigged
A pint of hard cider or so at a crack,
And set down the jug with a satisfied smack.
"Aha!" said he, "that grows the hair on ye,
bub,
My rule durin' hayin's more cider, less grub.
I take it, sah, wholly to stiddy my nerves,
And up in the stow hole I pitch 'em some curves
On a drink of straight cider, in harnsomer shape
Than a feller could do on the juice of the grape.
Some new folderinos come 'long every day,
All sorts of new jiggers to help git yer hay.
Improvements on cutter bars, hoss forks, and rakes,
And tedders and spreaders and all of them fakes.
But all of their patents ain't fixed it so yit
That hayin' is done without git-up and git.

If ye want the right stuff, sah, to take up the slack,
The stuff to put buckram right inter yer back,
The stuff that will limber and ile up yer j'int's,
Just trot out some cider and drink it by pints.
It ain't got no patents — it helps you make hay
As it helped out our dads in their old-fashioned way.

Molasses and ginger and water won't do,
'Twill irrigate some, but it won't see ye through.
And ice water 'll chill ye, and skim milk is durn
Mean stuff any place, sah, except in a churn.
I'm a temperate man as a general rule,
—The man who gits bit by the adder's a fool, —
But when it comes hayin' and folks have to strain,
I tell you, old cider's a stand-by in Maine."

Then Ephrum Wade reclined in the shade
And patiently gazed on the hay while it "made."

RESURRECTION OF EPHRUM WAY

Old Uncle Ephrum Isaac Way
— He had a fit the other day.
A sort of capuluptic spell ;
He hasn't been in no ways well
Since year ago come next July ;
He had a sunstroke; come blamed nigh
To passin' 'crost. And since, for him,
The poor old man's been dretful slim.
And 'twarn't surprisin' none, I say,
That fit of his the other day.
By time that Dr. Blaisdell come
His legs and arms had growed all numb.
He didn't sense things scource at all,
His lower jaw commenced to fall,
And, jedged from looks, there warn't no doubt
That Ephrum's soul was passin' out.
Fact is, they thought that he was dead ;
They tied the bandage round his head,
Laid out his shroud — when first they knew,
Eph kicked awhile and then come to ;
Got up and stared with all his eyes,
And said, " Why, this ain't Paradise !
Gol durn the luck, they let me in ;
Now here I'm back on earth agin.
I've been to Heaven ! I've been dead,
I've seen it All," so Ephrum said.

And while we gathered round with awe
He told us all the things he saw.
And while he yarned that tale of Death
The parson came, all out of breath,
Exclaiming o'er and o'er again,
"A vision! Wondrous! Blest of men!"
And asked, "Oh, tell us, Mr. Way,
How long were you allowed to stay?"
And then the crowd hung breathless round
A-harkin' until Ephrum found Some sort of language in his reach,
— For he was sort of dull in speech.
"Wal, friends," he slowly said at last,
"I ricollect that when I passed
The pearly gates and sills of gold
And see that blessed sight unfold
Before my dim old hazy eyes,
I got a shock of such surprise
I couldn't move, — I couldn't speak,
— Jest run my tongue down in my cheek
And sort of numbly pronged and pried
The chaw I took before I died.
— That's been my habit all my days;
When I am nervous anyways
I don't fly all to gosh. Instid
I simply, calmly shift my quid.
But jest as I had rolled her 'crost —
Wal, suthin' dropped and I was lost.

And all of Heaven, friends, I saw
Was while I shifted that air chaw."
I think, dear sir, I scarce need add
That seldom do you see so glad
A resurrection time as they Who stood there gave old Ephrum Way.
The parson first he tried to screw
His face up solemn, but that crew
Broke out and howled like they was daft.
And so he laughed and laughed and laughed.

LOOK OUT FOR YOUR THUMB

Hindsight is clearer than foresight,
But foresight is better and safer, old chap.
Experiment teaches, but common sense reaches And tests the bright baubles in Dame Future's lap.

I'm telling you what Eph Landers did
The time that the critter lost his fid.

He was sort of a quick, impulsive man ;
— When others walked, he always ran.

He never waited to calmly view,
But he got right up and slam-banged through.

Believed that the moments a feller took
To give the future a good square look

Was simply so much wasted time ;
His plan was, "Never look up ; just climb."

He was yankin' boulders a week ago
And things got balky and movin' slow.

He strung the chain 'round a good big rock
And found that he'd lost the little block

To catch the link ; it's used instid
Of a hook and link, and it's called a fid.

And Eph, he held the unhooked chain
By the ends, and he looked and he got profane.

But he couldn't find it and wouldn't wait,
— He was mad as a bug and desperate,

And the crack-brained critter — what do ye think ?

Why, he stuck his thumb in the unhooked link.

He didn't consider that 'twarn't his fid,
But the oxen started — and then he did !

He see'd his mistake, as most men do,
When the deed is done and the thing is through :

You stick your thumb where it don't belong
And the world will yank it, good and strong.

*Hindsight is clearer than foresight,
But you'd better ask foresight to give ye a point ;
Or, first thing you're knowin', Old World will be goin',
And he'll laugh while you howl with your thumb out of joint.*

THE TRIUMPH OF MODEST MARIA

Maria's comb hung lopsy-wise
And flapped athwart her filmy eyes,
Exactly like a slattern's hair
On washing day; and I declare
She was the slouchiest-looking hen
That pecked in T. B. Tucker's pen.

Cah-dah! Cah-dut!

She was the butt
Of every sort of jibe and cut.

Maria was a Brahma dame,
Broad and squat and plucked and lame.
The Leghorns cast a pitying smile
Upon her queer, old-fashioned style.
The Plymouth Rocks would jeer and flout
Because her legs were feathered out.

The cocks would strut,

Pah-rutt! Pah-rutt!

And snigger at her bloomers' cut.

The trim white Cochins tip-toed by
And froze her with disdainful eye;
Each tufted Houdan tossed her plume
And glared Maria's social doom.
Where'er she strolled in all the yard
Maria got it good and hard!

Cah-dut! Cah-dah!
Each social star
Just dropped Maria with a jar.

But she pursued her quiet way,
And picked and scratched the livelong day,
Kept early hours and ate bran mash,
Nor sought to cut a social dash.
And then one day she left her nest
With pallid comb and swelling breast.

Cah-dut! Cah-dah!
Hooray, hurrah!
Maria, you're a queen, you are!

The news went cackling round the pen — An egg! It measured twelve by ten.
And T. B. Tucker drove to town
To take that gor-rammed big egg down.
The editor put on his specs,
The villagers turned rubber necks,
And some collecting feller paid
Right smart for what Maria laid.
And European news was set Aside that week by the Gazette
In order that a glowing pen Might pay due praise to that old hen.

Cah-lip! Cah-lop!
You'll find, sure pop,
That modest merit lands on top.

SON HAS GOT THE DEED

Mother fights with Marshy, and Marshy fights with her,

— Don't give up yer propotty, I'm tellin' on yer, sir!

Don't give up yer propotty to nary blessed one,
— Don't keer whuther brother, sir, or nephly,
sir, or son.

Don't make over northin', sir, until you're done and through,

Or ye'll cuss the day ye done it till the air is black and blue.

Me and marm got feeble and we couldn't run the farm,

Son was newly married and we couldn't see the harm

In makin' on it over, we to have the ell and shed,
Use the sittin' room in common — and a room for one spare bed.

And so we made the papers and we signed 'em,
me and wife,

'Lowin' them the stand and stock, and us our keep for life.

Twelvemonth isn't finished, but the trouble has begun,

An' it's one continyal rowin' 'twixt us and her and son.

Marshy dings at mother and mother dings at her,
'F things ain't settled somehow, sir, they'll git to clawin' fur.

Don't give up yer propuppy, I'm tellin' on ye straight.

Don't keer who your family is, ye'll rue it sure as fate.

'Fore ye sign the papers they'll come round ye slicker'n cream,

But ye'll notice little later, sir, that things ain't what they seem.

Man that's got his propuppy, he's looked to with respect ;

Relations they come meechin' round to scratch, sir, where he's pecked.

Ye see, he rules the family roost and leads the family flock,

As proud and full of manners as a Cochin China cock.

But if the years have loosened up his intellect and grip,

And if he thinks his folks are straight, and lets the old farm slip,

He'll find the grin becomes a frown and sweetness turns to greed,

For folks see things in different light when once they've got a deed.

Now Marshy snarls at mother and mother sends it back,
And all the time, from sun to sun, it's clack and clack and clack!

Don't give up yer propputy, hang on till death,
I say;
It's time when you are done with it to give your all away.
Oh, how the devil snickers round when some old codger drools
About "the laying down of cares" — and jines
the ranks of fools!
And how the lawyers laugh and joke, and how the angels weep,
To see some old folks deed away their farm for board and keep!
— Never see'd no better cook than Marshy used to be,
When first along she'd ask us down to dinner or to tea.
Used to sweeten grub with smiles when she would pass a plate,
And me and marm, like two old coots, we swallowed hook and bait.
You bet we git some diff'rent looks, we git some diff'rent feed,

Jest like they'd throw it out to dogs, now son has got the deed.

An' Marshy growls at mother, and mother's growlin' wuss,

An' I — wal, I jest set and smoke and cuss — and cuss — and cuss!

AN IDYL OF COLD WEATHER

When all the sky seems blazing down, and sunshine curls the bricks,

And General Humidity puts in his biggest licks,
I welcome to my eyry, with a moist and dripping palm,

A placid old philosopher who runs a little farm,
Who says imagination helps a deal in keeping cool,

And who to comfort other men makes this his simple rule:

To talk of piping, biting days, and drifting winter storm

Whene'er the weather pipes it up and gets too thunderin' warm.

They're better far than fizz or smash or juleps,
sure's you're born,

— The honest little narratives of Frigid Weather John.

For though the sizzling summer time may boil and steam and hiss,

Who'd ever, ever think of it while listening to this?

“I never see'd a winter have a durnder, sharper aidge

Than in the year of Sixty-one, the year that I drove stage.

I never had so hard a job attendin' to my biz,
For everything 't was frizable, that year you bet was friz.

At last I done a caper that I hadn't done for years :

I got a little careless and I friz up both my ears.
The roads was awful drifted and I trod ten miles of snow,

And all the time that zippin' wind did nothin', sah, but blow.

Them ears of mine was froze so hard, stuck out so bloomin' straight,

I thought the wind would snap 'em off, it blew at such a rate.

And when at last I hauled up home, the missus bust in tears

And hollered, ' John, oh, massy me, you're going to lose your ears.'

But I — why, land o' goodness, I was cooler'n I be now,"

— And he passed his red bandanna up across his steaming brow,—

"I jest got out my hatchet and I chopped two cakes of ice

And held 'em on my friz-up ears — 'twas Granpy Jones' advice.

I didn't dast go in the house, but set there in the shed

A-holdin' them two chunks of ice to either side my head.

The chunks weighed fifty pounds apiece — that doctorin' didn't cost —

And so I got 'em big enough to take out all the frost.

My wife came out at last to see what made me keep so still,

And there I was, sah, sound asleep and snorin' fit to kill.

She got me in and gave me tea and helped me inter bed,

With that 'ere ice a-frozen tight and solid to my head.

'Twas sort of curi's, I confess, but still I slept complete,

A crystal palace on my head and soapstones on my feet.

It wasn't really what you'd call a calm and restful night,

But when the ice peeled off next day them ears come out all right."

They're better far than fizz or smash or juleps,
sure's you're born,

— These honest little narratives from Frigid Weather John.

BUSTED THE "TEST YOUR STRENGTH"

When pa was down to Topsham fair
I snooped around and heard him swear
To Jotham Briggs that it seemed to him
That muscle nowadays was slim,
For he said he'd stood there quite a length,
Seein' folks whang at the "test your strength,"
And there wasn't a one in all that spell
Who'd hit a crack that had tapped the bell.
And pa talked loud and he sassed the crowd,
And the crowd sassed pa, and he allowed He'd show 'em what; and so old Jote
Just held his hat and his vest and coat;
And pa he rolled his sleeves up tight,
Hauled out his plug and took a bite.
He whirled one arm in wind-mill style,
— Then whirled the other one awhile.
He picked his pessle out at length
And sassed the great, tall "test your strength."
"I'm goin' to soak ye now," says pa,
"You'll think it's y'earthquakes by the jar.
Git out the way and giv' me swing,
— I'll bust the ha'slet out the thing."
And pa he spit in both his fists
And give the handle two three twists,
And swung the beetle round and round
To give one big, gol-rippin' pound.

One knee was right up 'ginst his chin,
His eyes stuck out, his lips sucked in,
And down he fetched her with a jolt,
But pa — but pa — he missed his holt!
He lost his grip, the pessle flew,
And folks they scattered, I tell you.
Some chaps fell down and some they ducked,
And them fur off, by gosh, they hucked.
For that air pessle, sir, it come
Sky-hootin' like a ten-inch bumb.
It landed more'n eight rods away Right through the top of Drew's new shay, — Right 'twixt the gal and Ezry Drew,
And hully gee, it scart 'em blue.
While pa — wal, pa, he jest turned green
— Gawked fust at Drew, then that machine.
And hammed and stuttered out at length,
“I aimed 'er at that ‘test your strength’!”
“Good eye!” says Ez, as mad as sin,
And then he snorted, “Drunk agin!”
And pa — wal, warn't a thing to say,
'Cept pull, — and ask Ez, “What's to pay?”

"WHEN A MAN GETS OLD"

The clash and the clatter of mowing-machines
Float up where the old man stands and leans
His trembling hands on the worn old snath,
As he looks afar in the broadening path,
Where the shivering grasses melt beneath
A seven-foot bar and its chattering teeth.

When a man gits old, says he,
When a man gits old,
He is mighty small pettaters
As I've just been told.

I used to mow at the head of the crew,
And I cut a swath that was wide as two.
— Covered a yard, sah, at every sweep;
The man that follered me had to leap.
I made the best of the critters squeal,
And nary a feller could nick my heel.
The crowd that follered, they took my road
As I walked away from the best that mowed.
But I can't keep up with the boys no more,
My arms are stiff and my cords are sore:
And they've given this rusty scythe to me
— It has hung two years in an apple-tree —
And told me to trim along the edge Where the mowing-machine has skipped the ledge.

It seems, sah, skurcely a year ago
That I was a-showin' 'em how to mow,
A-showin' 'em how, with the tanglin' grass
Topplin' and fallin', to let me pass ;
A-showing 'em how, with a five-foot steel,
And never a man who could nick my heel.
But now it's the day of the hot young blood,
And I'm doin' the job of the fuddy-dud ;
Hacking the sides of the dusty road
And the corner clumps where the men ain't mowed.

And that's the way, a man gits told,
He's smaller pettaters when he grows old.

I'VE GOT THEM CALVES TO VEAL

It's a jolly sort of season, is the spring — is the spring,

And there isn't any reason for not feeling like a king.

The sun has got flirtatious and he kisses Mistress Maine,

And she pouts her lips, a-saying, "Mister, can't you come again?"

The hens are all a-laying, the potatoes sprouting well,

And fodder spent so nicely that I'll have some hay to sell.

But when I get to feeling just as well as I can feel,
All to once it comes across me that I've got them calves to veal.

Oh! I can't go in the stanchion, look them mothers in the eye,

For I'm mediatin' murder; planning how their calves must die.

Every time them little shavers grab a teat, it wrings my heart,

— Hate to see 'em all so happy, for them cows and calves must part.

That's the reason I'm so mournful; that's the reason in the spring

I go feeling just like Nero or some other wicked thing,
For I have to slash and slaughter; have to set an iron heel
On the feelings of them mothers; I have got them calves to veal.

Spring is happy for the poet and the lover and the girl,
But the farmer has to do things that will make his harslet curl.
And the thing that hits me hardest is to stand the lonesome moos
Of that stanchion full of critters when they find they're going to lose Little Spark-face, Little Brindle — when the time has come to part,
And the calves go off a-blatting in a butcher's rattling cart.
Though the cash the butcher pays me sort of smooths things up and salves
All the really rawest feeling when I sell them little calves,
Still I'm mournful in the springtime; knocks me off my even keel, Seeing suffering around me when I have them calves to veal.

THE OFF SIDE OF THE COW

Old Wendell Hopkins' hired man is an absent-minded chap,

He'll start for a chair, and like as not set down in some one's lap.

I happened along where he stopped to bait his hosses the other day,

— He'd given the hosses his luncheon pail and was trying to eat their hay,

— A kind of a blame fool sort of a trick for even a hired man,

But he tackled a different kind of a snag when he fooled with Matilda Ann,

— When he fooled with Matilda Ann, by jinks,
he got it square in the neck,

And the doctors say, though live he may, he's a total human wreck.

He's wrapped in batting and thinking now
Of the grief in insulting a brindle cow.

Matilda Ann gives down her milk and she doesn't switch her tail;

She gives ten quarts — week in, week out, and she never kicks the pail.

She doesn't hook and she doesn't jump, but even Matilda Ann

Ain't called to stand all sorts of grief from a dern fool hired man.

And when he stubbed to the milking-shed in sort of a dream and tried To make Matilda "So" and "Whoa" while he milked on the wrong, off side,
 She giv' him a look to wilt his soul and pugged him once with her hoof,
 And I guess that at last his wits were jogged as he slammed through the lintel roof.
 He's got a poultice on his brow
 Of the size of the foot of a brindle cow.

Now study the ways of the world, my son ; oh,
 study the ways of life !
 It's the hustling chap that gets the cash, or the girl he wants for a wife ;
 It's the feller that spots the place to grab, when Chance goes swinging by,
 Who gets his dab in the juiciest place and the biggest plum in the pie ;
 There's always a chance to milk the world —
 there's a teat, a pail, and a stool ;
 There's a place for the chap with sense and grip,
 but a dangerous holt for a fool.
 For while the feller that's up to snuff drums a merry tune in his pail,¹
 The fool sneaks up on the left-hand side and lands in the grave or in jail.
 — It's an awkward place, as you'll allow,
 The off-hand side of the world or a cow.

THE LYRIC OF THE BUCK-SAW

Ur-r rick, ur-r raw,

Ur-r rick, ur-r raw!

Have you buckled your back to an old buck-saw?
Have you doubled your knee on a knotty stick
And bobbed to the tune of ur-r raw, ur-r rick?
Have you sawed till your eye-balls goggled and popped,

Till your heart seemed lead and your breath was stopped?

Have you yeaked her up and yawked her down,
— As doleful a lad as there was in town?

If so, we can talk of the back-bent woe
That followed the youngsters of long ago.

Ah, urban chap, with your anthracite,
Pass on, for you cannot fathom, quite,
The talk that I make with this other chap
Who got no cuddling in Comfort's lap.

You'll scarcely follow me when I sing
Of the rasping buck-saw's dancing spring,
For the rugged rhythm is fashioned for
The ear that remembers ur-r rick, ur-r raw.

Ur-r raw, ur-r rick.

Ur-r raw, ur-r rick!

We pecked at our mountain stick by stick.
Our dad was a man who was mighty good
In getting the women-folks lots of wood.

And as soon as sledding came on to stay
 Jack got all work and he got no play.
 For daily the ox-sleds creaked and crawled Till the yard was full and the buck-saws talked.
 'Twas rugged toil and we humped our backs,
 But we scarce kept pace with dad's big axe.
 There were bitter mornings of "ten below,"
 There were days of bluster and days of snow,
 But with double mittens, a big wool scarf,
 And coon-skin ear-laps, we used to laugh
 At the fussiest blast old Boreas shrieked,
 And the nippingest pinches Jack Frost tweaked,
 We were warm as the blade of the yanking saw
 That steamed to the tune of ur-r rick, ur-r raw!

Ur-r raw, ur-r rick,

Ur-r raw, ur-r rick!

Ho, men at the desks, there, dull and sick!
 You slap your hands to your stiff old backs
 At thought of the days of the saw and axe;
 And you press your palms to an aching brow,
 And shiver to think of a saw-buck now.
 But ah, old fellows, you can't deny
 You hanker a bit for the times gone by,
 When the toil of the tasks that filled the day
 Made bright by contrast our bits of play.
 Oh, grateful the hour at set of sun,
 When the tea was hot, and the biscuits "done;"

When chocking his axe in the chopping-block,
Dad sung, "Knock off, boys, five o'clock."
Now tell me truly, ye wearied men,
Are you ever as happy as you were then,
When you straightened your toil-bent, weary backs

At the welcome plop of dad's old axe?
And tell me truly, can you forget
The sight of the table that mother set,
When dropping the saws in the twilight gloom,
We trooped to the cheer of the dear fore-room,
And there in the red shade's mellow light
Made feast with a grand good appetite?
— Made feast at the sweet old homespun board
On the plum preserves and the "crab jell" stored
For demands like these; and made great holes
In the heaps of the cream o' tartar rolls?
Ah, gusto! fickle and faint above
The savory viands you used to love,
What wouldn't you give for the sharp-set tang
That followed those days when the steel teeth sang?

— For zest was as keen as the bright, swift saw
When you humped to the tune of ur-r rick, ur-r raw?

MISTER KEAZLE'S EPITAPH

Foster the tinker traversed Maine
From Elkinstown to Kittery Point,
With a rattling pack and a rattling brain,
And a general air of "out of joint."
A gaunt old chap with a shambling gait,
A battered hat, and rusty clothes,
With grimy digits in sorry state,
And a smooch on the end of his big red nose.
That was the way that Foster went,
— Mixture of shrewdness and folly blent,
Mending the pots and the pans as ordered,
But leaving the leak in his nob unsoldered.

But Foster the tinker was no one's fool;
He fired an answer every time.
'Twas either a saw or proverb or rule,
Or else a bit of home-made rhyme.
And while he knocked at a pot or a pan
And puffed the coals of his little blaze,
He was ready and primed for the jocose man Who thought that the tinker was easy to phase.
It chanced that Foster stopped one night
With a man who thought a master sight
Of being esteemed as smart's a weasel — Man by the name of Obed Keazle.

And he pronged at Foster the evening through While the folks were having a merry laugh;
And they laughed the most when he said, "Now you

Compose me a good nice epitaph,
And your lodging here shan't cost a cent."
So Foster snapped at the chance and said
He would have it ready before he went,
And would make one verse ere they went to bed.

So Keazle listened with deep delight
While he heard the guileless chap recite,
With his head a-cock like a huge canary,
This sample of his obituary:

Thus he begun
Verse number one:

"A man there was who died of late,
Whom angels did impatient wait,
With outstretched arms and smiles of love
To bear him to the Realms Above."

Foster the tinker slept that night
On a feather tick that was three feet thick,
And Keazle attended in calm delight
To warm the bed with a nice hot brick.
And the tinker sat at the breakfast board
And blandly smiled and ate and ate,

Then piled on his back his motley hoard
And took his stand at the front yard gate.
He said, "I'll give ye the other half
Of that strictly fust-class epitaph."
There are doubts you know as to how it suited,
But the tinker didn't wait — he scooted.
For thus ran — whew!
Verse number two:

"While angels hovered in the skies
Disputing who should bear the prize,
In slipped the devil like a weasel
And Down Below he kicked old Keazle."

PLAIN OLD KITCHEN CHAP

Mother's furnished up the parlor — got a full,
new haircloth set,

And there ain't a neater parlor in the county,
now, I'll bet.

She has been a-hoarding pennies for a mighty tedious time ;

She has had the chicken money, and she's saved
it, every dime.

And she's put it out in pictures and in easy chairs and rugs,

— Got the neighbors all a-sniffin' 'cause we're puttin' on such lugs.

Got up curtains round the winders, whiter'n snow and all of lace,

Fixed that parlor till, by gracious, I should never know the place.

And she says as soon's it's settled she shall give a yaller tea.

And invite the whole caboodle of the neighbors in to see.

Can't own up that I approve it ; seems too much like fubb and fuss

To a man who's lived as I have — jest a blamed old kitchen cuss.

Course we've had a front room always ; tidy place enough, I guess, Couldn't tell, I never set there, never opened it unless

Parson called, or sometimes mother give a party or a bee,

When the women come and quilted and the men dropped round to tea.

Now we're goin' to use it common. Mother says it's time to start,

If we're any better'n heathens, so's to sweeten life with art.

Says I've grubbed too long with plain things, haven't lifted up my soul.

Says I've denned there in the kitchen like a woodchuck in his hole.

— It's along with other notions mother's getting from the club ;

But I've got no growl a-comin', mother ain't let up on grub !

Still I'm wishin' she would let me have my smoke and take my nap

In the corner, side the woodbox ; I'm a plain old kitchen chap.

I have done my stent at farmin' ; folks will tell you I'm no shirk ;

There's the callus on them fingers, that's the badge of honest work.

And them hours in the corner when I've stumbled home to rest
Have been earnt by honest labor and they've been my very best.
Land! If I could have a palace wouldn't ask no better nook
Than this corner in the kitchen with my pipe and some good book.
I'm a sort of dull old codger, clear behind the times, I s'pose;
Stay at home and mind my bus'ness; wear some pretty rusty clothes;
'Druther set out here'n the kitchen, have for forty years or more,
Till the heel of that old rocker's gouged a holler in the floor;
Set my boots behind the cook stove, dry my old blue woolen socks,
Get my knife and plug tobacker from that dented old tin box,
Set and smoke and look at mother clearing up the things from tea;
— Rather tame for city fellers, but that's fun enough for me.
I am proud of mother's parlor, but I'm feared the thing has put Curi's notions* in her noddle, for she says I'm underfoot;

Thinks we oughter light the parlor, get a crowd and entertain,
But I ain't no city loafer, — I'm a farmer down in Maine.
Course I can't hurt mother's feelin's, wouldn't do it for a mint,
Yet that parlor business sticks me, and I guess
I'll have to hint
That I ain't an entertainer, and I'll leave that job to son ;
I'll set out here in the kitchen while the folks are having fun.
And if marm comes out to get me, I will pull her on my lap,
And she'll know — and she'll forgive me, for I'm jest a kitchen chap.

TAKIN' COMFORT

I wouldn't be an emp'ror after supper's cleared away ;

I wouldn't be a king, suh, if I could.

So long as I've got health and strength, a home where I can stay,

And a woodshed full of dry and fitted wood.
For Jimmy brings the bootjack, and mother trims
the light,

And pulls the roller curtains, shettin' out the stormy night.

And me and Jim and mother and the cat set down —

Oh, who in tunket hankers for a crown?

Who wants to spend their ev'nin's sittin' starched and prim and straight,

A-warmin' royal velvet on a throne?

It's mighty tedious bus'ness settin' up so thund'rin' late,

With not a minit's time to call your own.

I'd rather take my comfort after workin' through the days

With my old blue woolen stockin's nigh the fire's social blaze,

For me and Jim and mother and the old gray cat Come mighty near to knowin' where we're at.

EPHRUM KEPT THREE DOGS

Ephrum Eels he had to scratch durned hard to keep ahead,

— But he always kept three dogs.

He couldn't keep a dollar bill to save his life,
they said,

— But he always kept three dogs.

He said he might have been some one if he'd had half a chance,

But getting grub from day to day giv' Ephrum such a dance,

He never got where he could shed the patches off his pants ;

— But he always kept three dogs.

Ephrum's young ones never looked as though they was half-fed,

— But he always kept three dogs.

The house would be so cold his folks would have to go to bed ;

— But Ephrum kept three dogs.

One was sort of setter dog and two of 'em was houn's,

Their skins was full of Satan ; they was always on their roun's,

Till people durned their pictures in half a dozen towns,

— But Ephrum kept his dogs.

They 'bated Ephrum's poll-tax 'cause he was too poor to pay,

— But Ephrum kept his dogs.

How he scraped up cash to license 'em it ain't in me to say,

— But I know he kept his dogs.

And when a suff'rin' neighbor ambuscaded 'em, Eph swore —

Then in a kind of homesick way he hustled round for more ;

He struck a lucky bargain and, by thunder, he bought four !

— Jest kept on a-keepin' dogs.

LAY OF DRIED-APPLE PIE

Sunning themselves on the southern porch,
Where the warm fall rays from the towering torch

Of the great sun flash in the glowing noons,
The drying apples, in long festoons,
Drink the breath of the crisp fall days,
Borrow the blush of the warming rays ;
Storing their sweetness, their rich bouquet,
Against that savage and wintry day
When the housewife's fingers shall by and by Mould them into dried-apple pie.

There they mellow and there they brown,
Homely enough to a man from town,
Merely strings of some shrunken fruit,
Swung in the sun. And yet they're mute Memory-ticklers to those who know
The ways of the farm in the long-ago :
— The kitchen table, the heaping store
Of round, red apples upon the floor.
The purr of the parer, the mellow snip
As the busy knives thro' the apples slip.
The merry chatter of boys and girls,
The rosy clutter of paring curls,
As hurrying knives and fingers fly
O'er the luscious fruit for dried-apple pie.

I'm idly thinking it sure must be That the rollicking sport of the apple-bee,
— The sweetness of smiles, the touch of the white

Hands flashing there in the candle-light, —
Must all in a mystic way be blent
In one grand flavor ; — that such was lent
To those mellowing strings, those festoons dun Swinging there in the late fall sun.

For lo, as I look I seem to see A dream of the past, a fantasy,
— A laughing, black-eyed roguish girl
Whirling a writhing paring curl ;
Chanting the words of the old mock spell
That all we children knew so well :
“ Three times round and down you go !
Now who is the one that loves me so ? ”

. . . Merely a fancy, a passing gleam
Of the old, old days ; — a sudden dream
Beguiled by some prank of a blurring eye
And the tricking song of a big, blue fly ;
— Merely a fancy, and yet, ah me,
How often I've wondered where she can be.

There they mellow and there they brown,
Homely objects to folks from town ;
Only some apples hung to dry
And doomed to be finally tombed in a pie.

ONLY HELD HIS OWN

Now there's Hezekiah Adams — nicest man you ever saw!
Never had a row with no one; never once got into law;
Always worked like thunderation, but to save his blessed life
Never seemed to get forehanded — and I've laid it to his wife,
For she always kept him meechin'; calls him down with sour tone, Till the critter hasn't gumption for to say his soul's his own.
T'other day
Happened to ride along his way;
Heseki',
Like a gingham rag hung out to dry,
Peak-ed and pale,
Lopped on the gate 'cross the upper rail.
"Howdy!" says I,
"Blamed if I know," says Heseki'.
"Don't feel sick,
But marm's kept my back on a big hot brick Till I can't tell Whuther I'm ailin' or whuther I'm well."
"Think," says I,
"It's too early to hoe when the ground's so dry?"

Says he, "'Bout all I'm sartin' of is, I shall dig come fall."
Says I, "Things look Like we farmers can fatten the pocket-book."
"Mebbe," says he,
"But marm vows there ain't much she can see."
"Ye can't jest crawl," Says I, "but there's money for folks with sprawl."
Old Hezekiah shifted legs and give a lonesome groan ;
"I begun with these two hands," said he,
"And I've only held my own."

He has always worked like blazes, but has always seemed to fail ;
— Made his grabs at prancin' Fortune, but has caught the critter's tail ;
Never jumped and gripped the bridle — wouldn't darst to on his life ;
Always acts too blasted meechin' — and I've laid it to his wife.

GRAMPY SINGS A SONG

Row-diddy, dow de, my little sis,
Hush up your teasin' and listen to this :
'Tain't much of a jingle, 'tain't much of a tune,
But it's spang-fired truth about Chester Cahoon.

The thund'rinest fireman Lord ever made
Was Chester Cahoon of the Tuttsville Brigade.
He was boss of the tub and the foreman of hose ;
When the 'larm rung he'd start, sis, a-sheddin'
his clothes,
— Slung cote and slung wes'cote and kicked off his shoes,
A-runnin' like fun, for he'd no time to lose.
And he'd howl down the ro'd in a big cloud of dust,
For he made it his brag he was allus there fust.
— Allus there fust, with a whoop and a shout,
And he never shut up till the fire was out.
And he'd knock out the winders and save all the doors,
And tear off the clapboards, and rip up the floors,
For he allus allowed 'twas a tarnation sin
To 'low 'em to burn, for you'd want 'em agin.
He gen'rally stirred up the most of his touse
In hustling to save the outside of the house.

And after he'd wrassled and hollered and pried,
He'd let up and tackle the stuff 'twas inside.
To see him you'd think he was daft as a loon,
But that was jest habit with Chester Cahoon.

Row diddy-iddy, my little sis,
Now see what ye think of a doin' like this:
The time of the fire at Jenkins' old place
It got a big start — was a desprit case;
The fambly they didn't know which way to turn.
And by gracious, it looked like it all was to burn.
But Chester Cahoon — oh, that Chester Cahoon,
He sailed to the roof like a reg'lar balloon;
Donno how he done it, but done it he did,
— Went down through the scuttle and shet down the lid.

And five minutes later that critter he came To the second floor winder surrounded by flame.

He lugged in his arms, sis, a stove and a bed,
And balanced a bureau right square on his head.
His hands they was loaded with crockery stuff,
China and glass; as if that warn't enough, He'd rolls of big quilts round his neck like a wreath,

And carried Mis' Jenkins' old aunt with his teeth.

You're right — gospel right, little sis, — didn't seem
The critter'd git down, but he called for the stream.
And when it comes strong and big round as my wrist
He stuck out his legs, sis, and give 'em a twist;
And he hooked round the water jes' if 'twas a rope
And down he come easin' himself on the slope, — So almighty spry that he made that 'ere stream
As fit for his pupp'us' as if 'twas a beam.
Oh, the thund'rinest fireman Lord ever made
Was Chester Cahoon of the Tuttsville Brigade.

UNCLE MICAJAH STROUT

Guess that more'n a dozen lawyers, off and on,
from time to time, Tried to settle down in Hudson, but they couldn't earn a dime.
Never got a speck of business, never had a single case,
Said they never in their travels struck so blummed-blammed funny place.
People did a lot of hustling, town was flourishing enough,
— Everybody but the lawyers had his fingers full of stuff.
Lawyers stayed till they got hungry, then they'd pull their shingles down
And go tearing off to somewhere, damning right and left the town.
Told the lawyers round the county, "Hudson's bound to starve you out Till some patriot up and poisons one old cuss down there named Strout.
'Cause they won't fork up a fee,
Long's he's round to referee.
'Case of difference or doubt Folks say, 'Wal, we'll leave her out
To Uncle Micajah Strout.'"

If a farmer bought a heifer and she didn't run to milk,
If a dickerer in horse trades struck a snag or tried to bilk,
If two parties got to haggling over what a farm
was worth,
Or if breeders split in squabbling over weight or age or girth ;
If a stubborn line-fence quarrel, right-of-way dispute, or deed,
Claim of heirship or of debtor, honest error,
biassed greed,
Rose to foster litigation, no one scurried to the law,
No one belched out objurgations, sputtered oaths,
or threatened war,
For there was a ready resource in a certain plain old gent, Unassuming, blunt, and honest. When he said a thing it went.
So there was no chance for wrangle, disputations,
snarls, or fray,
When the people of the village universally could say,
"Oh, what's the use to fuss?
We shall only make a muss.
We can fix it in about Half a minute. Leave it out
To Uncle Micajah Strout."

So no wonder all the lawyers banned and cursed the place, and left ;
For contention was but fleeting and the town was never cleft
By a quarrel or dissension. Rows were always settled young
By the pacifying magic of Micajah's ready tongue.
When at last his days were ended and he passed — well, now you bet
That he had the biggest funeral ever seen in Somerset.
Miss him? Guess we miss Micajah, but if ever dreams come true,
I've a sort of sneaking notion that he hasn't yet got through Settling things for us in Hudson ; for I dreamed — and this is straight —
That I died and went to Heaven, but was yanked up at the gate.
Peter showed me facts and figures, all the records, and allowed That I'd have to take my chances down below with t'other crowd ;
— Said the thing was pretty even, but he had to draw it fine,
Then commenced to hunt the index for the next shade in the line.

I protested, and we had it, this and that, and pro and con,
And I hung and begged and argued when he told me to move on.
Till at last he called a cherub, sent the little chap inside,
Owing up that he was bothered as to how he should decide.
“But I’ll give you all the show
That I can,” said he. “You know, I’ve arranged, in case of doubt,
— When it’s close, — to leave it out
To Uncle Micajah Strout.”

THE TRUE STORY OF A KICKER

There lived two frogs, so I've been told,
In a quiet wayside pool ;
And one of those frogs was a blamed bright frog,
But the other frog was a fool.

Now a farmer man with a big milk can
Was wont to pass that way ;
And he used to stop and add a drop
Of the aqua pure, they say.

And it chanced one morn in the early dawn,
When the farmer's sight was dim,
He scooped those frogs in the water he dipped,
— Which same was a joke on him.

The fool frog sank in the swashing tank
As the farmer bumped to town.
But the smart frog flew like a tug-boat screw,
And he swore he'd not go down.

So he kicked and splashed and he slammed and thrashed,
And he kept on top through all ;
And he churned that milk in first-class shape
In a great big butter ball.

Now when the milkman got to town,
And opened the can, there lay
The fool frog drowned ; but, hale and sound,
The kicker he hopped away.

MORAL.

Don't fret your life with needless strife,
Yet let this teaching stick :
You'll find, old man, in the world's big can
It sometimes pays to kick.

ZEK'L PRATT'S HARRYCANE

'Twould make an ox curl up and die
To hear how Zek'l Pratt would lie.

— Why, that blamed Zeke
Could hardly speak

Without he'd let some whopper fly.

Come jest as natchrul to him, too,

— 'Twas innocent, and them as knew

Zeke's failin's never took great stock,

But jest stood back and let him talk ;

Jest let him thrash his peck o' charf,

Then got behind his back to laugh.

Why, Zeke would — jest hold on and see

What that old liar told to me.

Last fall while gettin' in his grain

He said he see'd a harrycane

— A cikerloon, as they say West —

A-boomin' on like all possesst.

And Zekel see'd to his consarn

'Twas bound plumb straight for his new barn.

“ 'Twas crickitul,” says he. “ Thinks I,

I've got to be almighty spry.

If somethin' ain't done kind o' brash

That barn will get chawed inter hash.

It don't take long for me to think,

And what I done was quicker'n wink.

Jest gaffin' up a couple boards
 I sashayed out deerectly to'ards
 That howlin', growlin' harrycane
 That come a-raisin' merry Cain.

“When I'd got out as fur's my wind
 Would take me, I slacked up and shinned
 That cob-piled monnymment o' stones Between my land and Bial Jones.

 Though I don't scare

 I'll own, I swear,

It sent a twitter through my bones
 When I got where that I could see The thing 'twas goin' to tackle me.
 'Twas big and round and blacker'n Zip,
 — And powerful? My sakes, 'twould grip
 A tree or barn or line o' fence
 And make 'em look like thirty cents.
 While all the time it growled and chawed
 And spit the slivers forty rod.
 — As things looked then a bob-tailed darn
 Was too much price for Pratt's new barn.

“But let me tell ye this, my son,
 Me'n them boards warn't there for fun.

I held one underneath each arm ;

 The ends stuck out

 In front about

Ten feet. I held 'em aidge to aidge
And made a fust-class kind of wedge.
I grit my teeth. There was a calm
For jest a minit, kind o' 's ef
That harrycane had stopped itse'f
And snickered, snorted, laughed, and yelled,
Then stopped again and sort o' held
Its breath ; then swellin' up its breast
Swooped down to knock me galley-west.

“ It grabbed them boards and then 'twas fight!
But scare me? Not a gol-durned mite!
It pulled and tugged and yanked and hauled
And tooted, howled, and squealed and squalled ;
It picked up sculch and dirt, and threw,
And followed with a tree or two ;
It hit me with a rotten squash,
And give me fits with Marm Jones' wash.
But 'twarn't no use, suh, Zek'l Pratt Ain't built to scare at things like that.
I jest let into that air tyke
And punched its innards reg'lar-like
With them 'ere boards, and honest true,
I split her square and plumb in two.
One half went yowlin' by to right
And one to left — and out of sight.
While Zek'l Pratt was still on deck
With Marm Jones' night-gown round his neck.”

THOSE PICKLES OF MARM'S

It doesn't need eyesight to tell that it's fall,
Up here in Maine.

Though the glamor of yellow is over it all,
And the cold, swishing rain

Comes pelting down and goes stripping the leaves,

And smokes in cold spray from the edge of the eaves.

Ah*, it's wild out of doors, but come in here with me

Where mother's as busy as busy can be.

And you need not your eyes, sir, to know it is fall
In this stifle and stirring and steam like a pall.

For there's savor of spices and odorous charms

When your nose gets a sniff of these pickles of marm's.

You know it is fall without using your eyes,
Up here in Maine.

There is fragrance that floats as the flower-pot dies

In the tears of the rain.

And the hand of the frost strips the sheltering leaves

From the pumpkins, those bombs of the sentinel sheaves

That stiffly and starkly keep guard in the field,
A desolate rank without weapon or shield.
And the fragrance of death like a delicate musk Floats up from the field through the crispness of dusk ;
Yet out from the kitchen, more savory far, Drifts the fragrance of pickles compounded by ma.

The autumn sweeps past like a dame to a ball,
Up here in Maine.
Her perfumes would stagger shy Springtime, but Fall,
Like a matron of Spain,
Puts musk in her bosom and scent on her hair,
And prinks her gay robe with elaborate care.
Yet the fragrance she sheds has the savor of death,
The brain is turned giddy beneath her fierce breath,
Till over it all floats the vigorous scent
Of spices and hot things and good things, all blent ;
It's wonderful, friend, how it tickles and calms,
— That whiff from those simmering pickles of marm's.

“ THE MAN I KNEW I KILLED ”

Ezra Saunders, of Hopkins' Creek,
 Was the next old soldier asked to speak.
 He'd seen his share of the thousands slain
 In the active days of the Umteenth Maine ;
 And we settled back to hear him tell
 His reasons for thinking that “ War is Hell.”

“ Dear comrades of Keesuncook Post and ladies of the Corps,
 I thank you for this invite and I'm proud to take the floor.
 I was thinkin' as I set here of the battles that I've fought,
 Of the suff'rin' and the slaughter — and the sudden, awful thought Come across me that I'd taken very likely scores of lives,
 — Taken fathers from their children, taken husbands from their wives.
 While mad with heat of battle I was pumping reeking lead,
 Not knowing, no, nor caring, where the bullet found its bed.
 Now people they will ask us if we really, truly know
 For a fact that while a-fightin' we have ever killed a foe.

But it's rare you find a soldier who has seen, in heat of strife,
That the bullet he had fired was the one to take a life.

Now, to-night, I'm going to tell you, though I hate to, boys, I swan,
That I know I've done my murder; that I know
I've killed my man.

“ 'Twas when we got our rapping at the fight of Hatcher's Run;

I was running hard as any; — yes, I threw away my gun

And the rest of my equipment, and proceeded, friends, to steer

Just as fast as legs would help me for protection at the rear.

I was quite a nervy sprinter — 'bout as swift as you will find,

But I couldn't shake that Johnny who came slammin' on behind;

For he had the Georgy straddle and was sort of razor-edged,

And if nothin' special busted, I was spoke for,
so I jedged.

He was hanging to his rifle, but he didn't try to shoot,

— He see he had me solid, — but I give the blame galoot

A standard mile or such-like and had druv him ‘in the list,’
When I stepped upon a hubble, fell, and give my leg a twist.
And the tumble sort of stunned me so I laid there quite a spell, Expectin’ that he’d grab me; just a-harkin’ for his yell.
But things stayed calm and quiet, so I peeked;
he laid there sprawled
’Bout a dozen yards behind me. And he looked so queer I crawled Slowly back to reconnoitre, got where I could see his head,
Saw his face was black’s a stove-pipe. Apoplexy! He was dead.
And I stood and wept above him, stirred, dear comrades, to the peth
With the awful, awful pity for that man I’d run to death.
And my conscience always pricked me and my heart with grief is filled,
For there ain’t no question, comrades, there’s a man I know I killed.”

'LONG SHORE

CRUISE OF THE "NANCY P."

We was off Seguin with the "Nancy P.,"
From the Sheepscoot bound for Boston way ;
We was one day out, and massy me !
What a leak she'd sprung sence she left the bay !
Why, never knowed sech an awful leak,
Gad, we made her old pump squeak,
Gad, we made it whoop and hump,
— Two at a turn, on the stiddy jump, —
Ker-chonk, ker-chump,
With an up yo-ho and a down ker-bump.

But the more we pumped, the more she drewed,
And we all turned to for a mighty pull ;
But when we giv' her the soundin' rawd,
Why, bless yer soul, she was jam, bang full.
Plumb, jamb full to the soaked old deck, Full to her gol-durned tarred old neck ;
Wonder was how she kept aflo't,
With the sea a-gozzlin' in her thro't ;
Ker-do't, ker-do't,
— And we couldn't leave, 'cause there warn't no bo't.

So we hung to the pump and we giv' her Cain,
Though it didn't seem to be no use.
We thought of the good dry ground in Maine,
And durned the pelt of that old caboose,

Durned the hide of a tops'l tub,
 For we never thought we'd see the Hub;
 — Got so scart we forgot to thank
 Our lucky stars for a lo'd of plank,
 Ker-chink, ker-chank,
 And still we bounced that old pump crank.

So we woggled on like a bale of hay,
 And we set our teeth and we pumped with groans.

At last we got to Boston bay;
 But our arms were stretched to our ankle bones,
 Hands were the size of corn-fed hams,
 Eyes bulged out like the horns o' rams,
 We humped like monkeys bound for war,
 And ev'ry man had a raw, red paw,
 Ker-haw, ker-haw,

We beached that tub — and then we saw —

The "Nancy P.," she'd grown that old,
 Her butts had rotted all away.
 Her lo'd of planks still jammed the hold,
 But we'd left her bottom in Sheepscoot bay.
 So there we'd made a turrible try
 To pump old 'Lantic ocean dry.
 Over our rail, 'twixt you and me,
 We'd h'isted, suttin, a mile of sea;
 Blame me! But we
 Was a darn sick crowd on the "Nancy P."

"We was off Seguin with the 'Nancy P.'"

TALE OF THE SEA-FARING MAN

I purchased a glass of stiff Maine grog for a salty son of the sea,
And he confidentially leaned on the bar and spun this yarn for me:

“’Twas down in the aidge of the Saragos’ in the nineteenth latitood
That I think I see the dumdest sight that ever a sailor viewed.

“We was dobbin’ along with dumpy sails in a nigh-about dead calm,
When the forrard watch give a good long squint,
and he yapped a loud alarm.

“And there afloat, two points to port, was a shark, a reg’lar he ’un,
The biggest shark I’ve ever seen outside the Caribbeun.

“The old man reckoned he’d have his pelt, and he yelled to the second mate, ‘Sling over the biggest hook ye’ve got, with a good big plug o’ bait.’

“We dragged her astern and his nobbs come on,
and then with a mighty splosh,
He gulped the pork, he bit the rope, and away
he went, by gosh!

“ But when he’d hipered two miles to lee, and begun to wopse and wheel,
We figgered he found the lunch he had a rayther too hearty meal.

“ Yet right behind the quarter wash the critter
swum next day,
And though he gobbled the bait we threw, he allus got away.

“ And at last, do ye know, we liked the cuss for the way he showed his spunk,
And we named him Pete, and shared salt hoss,
and tossed him a daily junk.

“ He got the orts of the fish we caught and, all in all, I’ll bet
A two-hoss waggin wouldn’t haul the stuff that critter et.

“ Then one day Jones, the heftiest man we had in all the crew,
Went off the rail with a swinging sail, and Pete
he et him too.

“ From that time on we tipped our caps to the razor-backed old brute,
— We tipped our caps and pulled a bow in a most profound salute ;

“ For ’twas only due from a decent crew to honor a comrade’s grave,
Though ’twas odd, I’ll own, to have a tomb afloat on the ocean wave.

“ And the old man ordered the fish lines coiled, for he ’lowed ’twarn’t proper game
To bob behind for a grave-yard lot; so Pete swum on the same,

“ — Swum on the same, though we come to see that he didn’t act quite right.
For he grew as thin’s a belayin’ pin on that gol-durned appetite.

“ And we couldn’t figger the secret out, though the second mate was firm
That stowed ’tween decks in the shark’s insides was a bastin’ big tape-worm.

“ As we didn’t have no vermifuge we could only mourn for Pete,
And steal salt hoss when the mate warn’t round,
and give him lots to eat.

“ But at last he rolled his glassy eyes and give an awful churn,
And turned his belly up to view and drifted off astern.

“ He rolled and sogged on a logy swell like a nut-cake dropped in fat,
And it 'peared to all there was suthin' wrong with the shark we was lookin' at.

“ So the old man ordered the gig crew up, and the bos'n piped a tune,
And away we splashed with the mate ahead
a-grippin' a big harpoon.

“ He slung the thing when we drew abreast and we backed like all-possessed ;
But the shark was sleepin' sound, you bet, for we never broke his rest.

“ — We never broke his peaceful snooze, though plunk to the eyelet head Went rippin' in that big harpoon, — for, you see, the shark was dead.

“ And the old man ordered an ortopsy, for the thing seemed mighty queer That an able-bodied, hearty shark was deader'n a door-knob here.

“ So the mate was medical 'xaminer, and he straddled the critter's back And laid him open from deck to keel with one almighty whack.

“ Now listen close while I tell the rest, for this is the story's peth,

— You may take my nob for a scuttle-butt if the shark warn't starved to death.

“ Starved to death, though the sea was full of the fattest kind of fish,

— Starved, though a seaman plump and sound had tumbled in his dish,

“ — Starved though he had in his gorged insides
I'll bet a hundredweight

Of every kind of a floating thing from codfish down to bait.

“ And this was how: He'd spied, we judged, an empty cask afloat,

And bein' a glutton he grabbed the thing and tucked it down his throat.

“ The cask, we found, had an open end — the bottom was good and stout

— The shark had swallowed the whole end fust
— the open end was out.

“ And ev'ry mossel the critter et was scooped by the cask inside;

His vittles failed to reach the spot, and so the poor shark died.”

This is a sample of weird, wild yarns the mariners relate

Under the spur of a glass of grog in a Prohibition State.

CAP'N NUTTER OF THE "PUDDENTAME"

The foam bells tinkle at gilded prow

— There's a creamy wake to the far horizon.

And she tiptoes along with a New York bow

To the curt'sying waves, and we'll all allow,

She's the daintiest yacht we have set our eyes on.

While sneaking after, in grimy shame,

Rolls tops'l schooner, the "Puddentame."

On the rocking surge swings the millionaire,

And about him splendor and music and laughter;

The glint of jewels and ladies fair;

Jollity throned, and Old King Care

Drowned in the brine and dragging after.

But the billows lift and toss the same

Old Cap'n Nutter in the "Puddentame."

Under the gloom of the Porcupines,

In the gleam of the lights of the summer city,

In a tapestried cabin the rich man dines,

And toasts his friends in his bubbling wines,

While the repartee and the careless ditty

Float from the lips of squire and dame

To Cap'n Nutter of the "Puddentame."

And the old man munches his bread and cheese
In the gloom and grime of his little cuddy ;
— Through the mirk of the dusty deadlight sees This riot of riches ; then on his knees
— This sea-stained, warped old fuddy-duddy —
He prays for their souls in the Saviour's name,
— Does Cap'n Nutter of the " Puddentame."

And they ? — Why, they neither know nor care
That the honest chap has knelt and pleaded.
For just at the edge of the dazzling glare
From the rocking yacht of the millionaire,
The old craft swings and sways unheeded.
Yet who'll sleep better, jaded Fame
Or Cap'n Nutter of the " Puddentame" ?

GOOD-BY, LOBSTER

We've gazed with resignation on the passing of the auk,

Nor care a continental for the legendary rok ;
And the dodo and the bison and the ornitho-rhyn-chus

May go and yet their passing brings no shade of woe to us.

We entertain no sorrow that the megatherium Forever and forever is departed, dead and dumb:

But a woe that hovers o'er us brings a keen and bitter pain

As we weep to see the lobster vanish off the coast of Maine.

Oh, dear crustacean dainty of the dodge-holes of the sea,

I tune my lute in minor in a threnody for thee.
You've been the nation's martyr and 'twas wrong to treat you so,

And you may not think we love you ; yet we hate to see you go.

We've given you the blazes and hot-potted you,
and yet

We've loved you better martyred than when living, now you bet.

You have no ears to listen, so, alas, we can't explain
The sorrow that you bring us as you leave the coast of Maine.

Do you fail to mark our feeling as we bitterly deplore
The passing of the hero of the dinner at the shore?
Ah, what's the use of living if you also can't survive
Until you die to furnish us the joy of one
"broiled live"?
And what can e'er supplant you as a cold dish on the side?
Or what assuage our longings when to salads you're denied?
Or what can furnish thunder to the legislative brain
When ruthless Fate has swept you from the rocky coast of Maine?

I see, and sigh in seeing, in some distant, future age
Your varnished shell reposing under glass upon a stage,
The while some pundit lectures on the curios of the past,

And dainty ladies shudder as they gaze on you aghast.

And all the folks that listen will wonder vaguely at

The fact that once lived heathen who could eat a Thing like that.

Ah, that's the fate you're facing — but laments are all in vain

— Tell the dodo that you saw us when you lived down here in Maine.

CURE FOR HOMESICKNESS

She wrote to her daddy in Portland, Maine, from out in Denver, Col., And she wrote, alas, despondently that life had commenced to pall ;
And this was a woful, woful case, for she was a six months' bride
Who was won and wed in the State of Maine by the side of the bounding tide.
And ah, alack, she was writing back that she longed for Portland, Maine, Till oh, her feelings had been that wrenched she could hardly stand the strain !
Though her hubby dear was still sincere, she sighed the livelong day
For a good old sniff of the sewers and salt from the breast of Casco bay.
And she wrote she sighed, and she said she'd cried, and her appetite fell off,
And she'd grown as thin's a belaying-pin, with a terrible hacking cough ;
And she sort of hinted that pretty soon she'd start on a reckless scoot And hook for her home in Portland, Maine, by the very shortest route.
But her daddy dear was a man of sense, and he handles fish wholesale,

And he sat and fanned himself awhile with a big broad codfish tail ;

And he recollected the way he felt when he dwelt in the World's Fair whirl.

He slapped his head. "By hake," he said, "I know what ails that girl."

And he went to a ten-cord pile of cod and he pulled the biggest out,

A jib-shaped critter, broad's a sail, — three feet from tail to snout.

And he pasted a sheet of postage stamps from snout clear down to tail,

Put on a quick delivery stamp, and sent the cod by mail.

She smelled it a-coming two blocks off on the top of the postman's pack ;

She rushed to meet him, and scared him blind by climbing the poor man's back.

But she got the fish, bit out a hunk, ate postage stamps and all,

And a happy wife in a happy home lives out in Denver, Col.

ON THE OLD COAST TUB

Blast from the winter. Wreck-wood and splinter
 Adrift in the smother of roaring lee shore :
 And a blunt-nosed old coaster ; some ancient sea-wagon,
 Sweeps in from the fog no more — no more,
 Rolls in from the sea no more.

Bricks make her load and New York her destination.

(Dern yer hide, ye snoozer, keep a-pumping there, I say !)

Bricks for a cargo and she leaks like thunderation,

And the gulls a-trailin' after like the buzzards sniffin' prey !

Pump away !

And ev'ry brick a-soakin' in her innards growls and grates ;

She hesitates — she balks and waits,
 And holy hawse-pipe, how she hates
 To leave Penobscot Bay !

Pounce ! On her bows leap the combers like a tiger-cat,

(Lift 'er on the handle, there, you loafer, pump away !)

Lurch! Reels her gait, and her sloshin' scuppers hiccup at
The sight of drunken breakers fightin' past
'er up the bay.

Pump, I say!

Oh, give her all the rotten sail her leary masts will lug.

Ka-chig, ka-chug; her ugly mug
Rolls orkord as a driftin' jug,
And so we slosh away.

Grub to last a week, a quadrant and an alma-nick;

(Wag 'er there, you rascal, wag 'er lively there, I say!)

Rotten are her sails and her hold a-roar with shiftin' brick,

— Ain't we up ag'inst it if a norther comes our way?

Pump, I say!

Stagger down, ye bloated drunkard, wheel and take the starboard tack!

Ka-slup, ka-smack, now work 'er back,
Jest hear that old black canvas crack.

Ho! Davy Jones, hooray!

Black cordage tangled, dead features mangled,
Adrift in the smother of roaring lee shore.

And a blunt-nosed old coaster; some broad-bellied wagon

Sweeps in from the sea no more — no more,
— Rolls in from the sea no more.

TALE OF THE KENNEBEC MARINER

Guess I've never told you, sonny, of the strandin' and the wreck

Of the steamboat "Ezry Johnson" that run up the Kennebec.

That was 'fore the time of steam-cars, and the "Johnson" filled the bill

On the route between Augusty and the town of Waterville.

She was built old-fashioned model, with a bottom's flat's your palm,

With a paddle-wheel behind her, druv' by one great churnin' arm.

Couldn't say that she was speedy — splashed along and made a touse,

But she couldn't go much faster than a man could tow a house.

Still, she skipped and skived tremendous, dodged
the rocks and skun the shoals,

In a way the boats of these days couldn't do to save their souls.

Didn't draw no 'mount of water, went on top instead of through.

This is how there come to happen what I'm going to tell to you.

— Hain't no need to keep you guessing, for I know you won't suspect
How that thunderin' old "Ez. Johnson" ever happened to get wrecked.

She was overdue one ev'nin', fog come down
most awful thick;
'Twas about like navigating round inside a feather tick.
Proper caper was to anchor, but she seemed to run all right,
And we humped her — though 'twas resky — kept her sloshing through the night.

Things went on all right till morning, but along 'bout half-past three Ship went dizzy, blind, and crazy — waves seemed wust I ever see.
Up she went and down she scuttered; sometimes seemed to stand on end,
Then she'd wallope, sideways, cross-ways, in a way, by gosh, to send Shivers down your spine. She'd teeter, fetch a spring, and take a bounce, Then squat down, sir, on her haunches with a most je-roosly jounce.
Folks got up and run a-screaming, forced the wheelhouse, grabbed at me,

— Thought we'd missed Augusty landin' and had gone plum out to sea.

— Fairly shot me full of questions, but I said
'twas jest a blow ;

Still, that didn't seem to soothe 'em, for there warn't no wind, you know !

Yas, sir, spite of all that churnin', warn't a whisper of a breeze

— No excuse for all that upset and those strange and dretful seas.

Couldn't spy a thing around us — every way
'twas pitchy black,

And I couldn't seem to comfort them poor crit-ters on my back.

Couldn't give 'em information, for 'twas dark's a cellar shelf ;

— Couldn't tell 'em nothing 'bout it — for I didn't know myself.

So I gripped the "Johnson's" tiller, kept the rudder riggin' taut,

Kept a-praying, chawed tobacker, give her steam,
and let her swat.

Now, my friend, jest listen stiddy : when the sun come out at four,

We warn't tossin' in the breakers off no stern and rockbound shore ;

But I'd missed the gol-durned river, and I swow
this 'ere is true,
I had sailed eight miles 'cross country in a heavy autumn dew.
There I was clear up in Sidney, and the tossings and the rolls
Simply happened 'cause we tackled sev'ral miles of cradle knolls.
Sun come out and dried the dew up; there she was a stranded wreck,
And they soaked me eighteen dollars' cartage to the Kennebec.

DRIVE, CAMP, AND WANGAN

THE LAW 'GAINST SPIKE-SOLE BOOTS

It's a case of scuff in your stocking-feet, from Seboomook down, my hearties ;

Sling your spikers around your neck and swear your way to town.

The dudes that we sent to legislate, and figger at balls and parties,

Have tinkered the laws to suit themselves, and they've done us good and brown.

There's a howl, you bet, from the Medway dam across to the Caucmogummac,

For the laws came up in the tote-team mail, and we've got the new statoots,

And of all the things that was ever planned to give us a gripe in the stomach,

The worst is the corker that t'runs us down for a-wearin' our old calked boots.

You can't chank on to a hotel floor,

You've got to leave calked boots at the door.

They make ye peel your hucks in the street

And walk to the bar in your stocking-feet.

It's a blank of a note that a man with chink

Can't prance to the rail and get his drink,

But it's five and costs if ye mar the paint,

And ten if the feller that makes complaint

Gets mad at a playful push in the eyes
And goes into court with a lot of lies.
It's ten if ye sliver a steam-bo't's deck
— There ain't no argue — it's right in the neck.
And they soak you, too, on the railroad train ;
— Why, there's hardly a loggin' crew in Maine
But what has claimed, as a nat'ral right,
A chance to holler and beller and fight,
And knock the stuffin' out of the seats,
Rip off the blinds and club with the cleats.
But now if the bloomin' brakeman talks,
And you vaccinate him once with calks ;
If you feel like a man with a royal flush
And, jest for the joke of it, rip some plush,
Oh, they take that law and they peel you sore ;
You pay for the damage, and ten plunks more.
'Tain't much like the days when we had some rights,
When we roosters sharpened our spurs in fights,
When never a crowd put up galoots
That could scrap with the fellers with spike-sole boots.

It's a case of step to the wangan camp, and buy some partent leathers ;
And go a-snoopin' along to town like a dude on his weddin'-trip ;
And the only thing you can do to a guy is to tickle
his nose with feathers,

DRIVE, CAMP, AND WANGAN 125

And curl in your seats in the smokin'-car when a drummer gives you lip.

There was fun, by gee, in the good old days when we whooped 'er into the city,

And you trailed our way by the slivers we left from the railroad down to the dives,

And we owned the town where we left our cash ;
and now it's a thunderin' pity

If all of a sudden you've grown too good for the boys who are off the drives.

Oh, make the laws, go make the laws with your darned old Legislature,

Jest give us orders to wear plug hats and come down in full dress suits.

We'll wear the togs ; but give us spikes, or you've busted the laws of nature,

For angels can just as well shed wings as a driver his spike-sole boots.

THE CHAP THAT SWINGS THE AXE

Sing a song of paper; first the tall, straight spruce,
 Torn from off the mountains for the roaring presses' use.
 — A shrieking laceration by the "barker" and the saw;
 A slow, grim maceration in the grinder's grumbling maw;
 A dizzy dash through calenders and over whirring rolls,
 — And the press can smut the paper so's'to save or damn your souls;
 The press has got the paper, it can give you lies or facts
 — That vexes not the fellow up in Maine who swings the axe.

Chock!

Chock!

Chock!

The throb stuttered up from the heart of the wood,
 Erratic and faint, yet the trees understood,
 — Though distant and dull like the tick of a clock
 It started a tremor through all the great flock.

DRIVE, CAMP, AND WANGAN 127

King Spruce was a-shiver and rooted with dread,
While past him to safety the wood people fled ;
The fox with his muzzle turned backward to snuff

The bear trundling on like an animate muff,
And rabbits up-ending in wonder and fright,
Then scudding once more with the others in flight.

Yet that which has reason most urgent to flee Stands grim in the rout of the panic — the Tree !

While up the long slope, glaring red 'gainst the snow, —

His shirt of the hue of the butcher, — the foe, Beating fierce at the trunks with relentless attacks,

Comes on to the slaughter, the Man with the Axe.
Chock !

Chock !

Chock !

Shudder and totter and shiver and rock !
— Pygmy assailing with dull steady knock.
Trunk yawning wide with a hideous gash.
Snow-covered limbs thrown a-sprawl ; and then crash !

The pens and the presses are waiting, and eyes
That will glow with delight, or dilate with surprise.

For there in the heart of the spruce there is rolled
The fabric for thousands of stories untold.
And on the white paper may later be spread
The fall of a nation, or fame of one dead
Who now strides abroad in his health and success,
But will pass to the tomb when that log meets the press.
There under the bark of that spruce there is furled
A web that will carry the news of a world,
That clamors and crowds at the swaying red backs
Of the toilers of Maine, the rough men of the axe.

THE SONG OF THE WOODS'
DOG-WATCH

'Tis the weirdly witching hour of the woods'
"dog-watch,"

When the guide suspends the kettle in the ash
limb's crotch,

Stirs the drowsy, drowsy embers till the cozy fire beams

And flickers dance like gnomes and elves athwart
the glowing dreams

Of the sleeping town-bred fisher who is stretched with placid soul

On the earth in sweeter slumber than his town couch can cajole.

Ah, 'tis tough on bone and muscle, is this chasing after fun —

And a sleeper gets to sleeping forty knots along 'bout one.

But the guide is up a-stirring — monstrous shape with flaring torch,

Prodding up the dozing fire for the woods' "dog-watch."

And the slow unclosing eyelids of the startled dreamer see

This dreadful apparition thrown in shadows on a tree.

And his heart for just a second goes to skirruping about

As it flopped when he was wrestling with that five-three-quarter trout.

But the ogre leaves the shadows, leans against a handy tree

And remarks: "The water's bilin'; won't ye have a cup o' tea?"

And he wakes to a night of the fisherman's June,

—Afar the weird lilt of the dolorous loon

Floats up from the heart of the fair, velvet night—

A globule of sound winging slow in its flight.

As elfin a note as a gnome ever blew,

It wells from the waters, "Ah-loo-hoo-ah-hoo-o-o-o."

O spell of the forest! O glimmer and gleam

From the sheen of the lake and the mist-breathing stream!

The night and the stars and the dolorous loon

Make mystic the spell of the fisherman's June.

The spruces sing the lyric of the wood's dog-
watch;

The kettle as it bubbles in the ash limb's crotch,

The rustle of the spindles of the hemlock and the pine,

The crackle where the licking tongues of ruddy fire twine,

“No woman's hand to make it home.”

DRIVE, CAMP, AND WANGAN 131

The oboe, in the distance, of the weird and lonesome loon,
— This chorus sings the lyric of the blessed month of June.

What June? Your June of meadows or your June of scented breeze,
Or your June begirt with roses stretched in hammock at her ease?

Such a deity for maidens! I can bow to no such June!

I extol the mystic goddess of the Forest's Silent Noon.

— Noon of day or noon of night-time — in the vast and silent deeps,

Where human care or human woe or human envy sleeps,

Where rugged depths surround me, dim and silent, deep and wide,

And no human shares my joy but that second self, my guide.

— Here's a June that one can worship. Here's a June by right a queen,

'Neath her hand eternal mountains, 'neath her feet eternal green.

And here will I adore her, seeking out her awful throne

With the Silence swimming round me, and alone, thank God, alone!

FIDDLER CURED THE CAMP

Wal, things they was deader'n old Billy-be-darn,
The boss was pernicky, cook wouldn't yarn ;
For we'd heard ev'ry story old Beans had to spin,
And we hadn't no longin's to hear 'em agin ; Old Pitts, the head chopper, we'd pumped him out, too,

— And he swow'd that he'd sung ev'ry song that he knew.

As the rest wasn't gifted, a sort of a damp
Old glister of silence fell over Peel's camp.
The deacon-seat doldrums were blacker'n old Zip,
We'd set there an hour with never a yip,
'Cept the suckin' o' lips at the quackin' T.D.'s,
With the oof and the woo of the lonesome pine trees

W'istling over our smok'-hole. It grew on us, too ;

Our thoughts got as thick an' as musty an' blue
As the cloud o' tobacker smoke, mixed with the steams

From the woolens that dried on the stringers and beams.

Old Attegat Peter said we was bewitched ;
He said that he seed the Old Gal when she twitched

A fistful o' hair out the gray hosses' tail
For a-makin' witch tattin'. She'd hung on a nail

DRIVE, CAMP, AND WANGAN 133

The queerisome web, so he said, an' the holes
— They were fifty — they stood for the whole of our souls.

An' there we would swing, an' hang there we must,
Till the hoodoo was busted. Eternally cussed,
So he said, was the buffle-brained feller that dared
To touch the witch-web that was holding us snared.

Aw, we didn't believe it — 'tain't like that we did!

But still we warn't fussy! If we could get rid

Of the dumps by a charm, we was ready to try,
And Peter said singin' would knock 'em sky high.

Wal, Peter said "singin' ;" I can't tell a lie,
'Twarn't singin', 'twarn't nothin' — that mournful ki-yi!

That seemed like a beller in ev'ry man's boot,
An' 'twarn't none surprisin' the witch didn't scoot.

So there did we set in a stew an' a cloud,
A grumpy old, lumpy old dob of a crowd.

But oh, landsy sake a-Peter, when the fiddle come to camp,

W'y you wouldn't know the place:

— Wuz a grin on ev'ry face

W'en we know'd the critter'd got it. An' it reely seemed the lamp

Had a 'lectric light attachment; an' you oughter heard us stamp

When that feller took his fiddle out an' rosined up the bow.

Then he yawked an' yeaked an' yawked

'Twistin' keys ontill she squawked,

An' we set there jest a-gawpin'; not a word to say, but, oh,

We was right on pins an' needles fer to have him let 'er go.

Tweedle-weedle, yeaky, yawky, 'nother twist, an' pretty soon

He was waitin' to begin,

With 'er underneath his chin;

He a-askin', all a-grinnin', "Wall, boys, name it; what's your tune?"

An' we hollered all in concert, "Whoop 'er up on 'Old Zip Coon'!"

Oh, the deacon-seat had cushions an' the bunks were stuffed with down,

DRIVE, CAMP, AND WANGAN 135

While the feller sawed the strings ;
We could feel our sproutin' wings,
An' we wanted to go soarin', go a-sailin', wear a crown,
Tear the ground up, whoop-ta-ra-ra, mix some red and paint the town.

Oh, he played the "Lights o' London" an' he played "The Devil's Dream,"
— All the old ones — played 'em all ;
Rode right on 'er — made 'er squall ;
Didn't stop to semi-quiver, tip-toe Nancy, pass the cream ;
No ; he let 'er go Jerooshy, clear the track an'
lots o' steam.

Thought I'd never heerd such playin' sence the Lord had giv' me breath
An' that P. I. — seems as if He could put the bang an' biff
In the chitter of a cat-gut like to touch the very peth
In yer marrow ; like to raise yer from the very jaws of death.

So, oh, landsy sake a-Peter, when that fiddle come our way,

Say, you wouldn't know the place,
— Wus a grin on ev'ry face.
— Went to workin' like the blazes an' our vittles set — an' say,
Guess the Hoodoo flew to thunder when the Haw-Haw come to stay.

THE SONG OF THE SAW

The song is the shriek of the strong that are slain,

— The monarchs that people the woodlands of Maine ;

— 'Tis the cry of a merciless war.

And it echoes by river, by lake, and by stream, Wherever saws scream or the bright axes gleam,

— 'Tis keyed to the sibilant rush of the steam,
And the song is the song of the saw.

Come stand in the gloom of this clamorous room,

Where giants groan past us a-drip from the boom,

Borne here from the calm of the forest and hill,

— Aghast at the thunderous roar of the mill,

At rumble of pulley and grumble of shaft

And the tumult and din of the sawyer's rude craft.

Stand here in the ebb of the riotous blast,

As the saw's mighty carriage goes thundering past,

One man at the lever and one at the dog.

The slaughter is bloodless and senseless the log,

Yet the anguish of death and the torment of hell

Are quavering there in the long, awful yell,
That shrills above tumult of gearing and wheel
As the carriage rolls down and the timber meets steel.

Scream! And a board is laid bare for a home.
Shriek! And a timber for mansion and dome,
For the walls of a palace, or toil's homely use,
Is reft from the flanks of the prostrate King Spruce.

And thus in the clamor of pulley and wheel,
In the plaint of the wood and the slash of the steel,

Is wrought the undoing of Maine's sturdy lords,
— The martyrs the woodlands yield up to our swords.

The song is the knell of these strong that are slain,

The monarchs that people the woodlands of Maine.

And the Fury that whirls in the din of this war,

With rioting teeth and insatiable maw, is the saw!

And this is the song of the saw.

DOWN THE TRAIL WITH GUM PACKS

Ev'ry nugget clean and sound,
Red's a jewel, smooth and round,
Worth a dollar'n ten a pound ;
Here's your gum, ye giddy girls,
Here's your Maine spruce gum.

The chaps that went off with the Klondike diggers

For gold — jest gold,
Have slumped in the snow, and they work like niggers,

And they haven't got rich, we're told.
We're snowshoeing down from the north of Katahdin,

See here! Yum, yum!
Here's a tole to tease Maud to come into the garden

—These rich, rosy lumps o' spruce gum.

Our fires are dowsed in the lonesome old camps, We've left them to wolves and the foxes and damps.

The trail of our snowshoes lies snakin' behind,
For we're clawing for 'home with the treasures
we've mined.

We've no sort of use for the pick and the sluice ;
Our Klondike has been the straight trunks of the spruce.

Let them that elect grub the dirt for a "gleam,"
Our ore is the gum and our lode is the seam
That doesn't go sneaking in mire and clay,
But grins at the sun and drinks deep of broad day.

Go grope for your gold in the bowels of mud!
We'll cleave our fresh nuggets of resinous blood Forced out from the heart through the fibre and vein
Of the giants who lurk in the woodlands of Maine.

Just squint through this bubble and gaze at the blaze:

That red is the fire of hot summer days;
That glimmer is autumn; that glow is the tint
That was lent by some campfire's guttering glint.
And here is a globe like the eye of a cat,
And this one is amber like honey; and that Is a tear rosy red with the anger and shame
Of a king glooming down as the axe-heavers came;

— Staring down as around him his kin roared to earth

Midst the oaths of the swampers and Labor's rude mirth.

That tear of the spruce, may it go to the pearls
Flashing bright 'neath the lips of some sweetest of girls!

DRIVE, CAMP, AND WANGAN 141

These, then, are the treasures we bring in our packs,

— Each round, rosy globule as sweet as the smacks

We'll get from the kids when they swoop with a roar

At dad just the second he opens the door.

Clear out your old scraps, Mr. Druggist: we come

With a good hefty jag of the season's new gum.

Ev'ry nugget clear and sound,

Red's a jewel, smooth and round,

Worth a dollar'n ten a pound.

Here's your gum, ye giddy girls,

Here's your Maine spruce gum.

REAR O' THE DRIVE

The rain has raised the river an' she's up to driving pitch,
 An' it's oh, an' grab your peavies an' go sloppin'
 in the wet.
 We've got ter send 'er whoopin' now without a ketch or hitch,
 But it won't be kid-glove bus'ness, oh, my hearties, you can bet.
 Empty the water out of your boots
 And gaffle your peavies, you P.I. galoots.
 There's the rips at Rundy's Corner, and the sluice at Puzzle Gorge ;
 You can drive 'em and connive 'em, but the timber's bound to lodge.
 An' sticks will buck — with best of luck — as offish-like as hogs,
 For there ain't no calkerlatin' how you'll run a drive o' logs.

Chase the heathen with a sword,
 Run the cattle with a goad,
 All we want's our Oldtown peavies, when our drives go overboard.
 An' we'll foller, sloshin' in,
 Yes, we'll waller to the chin,
 An' we'll herd 'em through the wildest stream that ever frothed and roared.

DRIVE, CAMP, AND WANGAN 143

So, look alive,
It's after five,
An' the drouth is a-chasin' the rear o' the drive.
Foller down, foller down with your peavies on your backs,
For the herd that runs ahead of us goes loafin'
'less it's chased.
They know they're off to market, an' they dread
the saw an' axe,
An' you've got to go and welt 'em, though the water's to your waist,
For they balk on Depsconneagon when a sixty-footer halts ;
Ev'ry eddy stands a-ready for to swing 'em in a waltz.
An' ev'ry rock is chock-a-block with jack-strawed
pine an' spruce,
Ontil you've got the devil's job to try and turn
'em loose.

But our goadstick is the peavy, an' our cant-dog is the pup
That'll worry 'em an' hurry 'em an' rush 'em, chase 'em up.
Oh, the drouth is right behind us, but we've passed the North Twin flume,
An' we'll beat the sun in heaven in the race for Pea Cove boom.

MATIN SONG OF PETE LONG'S COOK

It's dark in the camp, and the woods outside
 Are dark, dark, too!
 And a hundred men still open wide
 Their loud bay-zoo.
 It's sort of mean to rout 'em jus'
 To work once more;
 I'd like to let each tired cuss
 Jus' lay and snore.
 But I've been up for an hour or two
 And grub's all on;
 And now as the cook of Pete Long's crew
 I toot my horn.

The weirdest of all wood-sounds, by the way,
 Is a cook's queer cadence at break of day:

Whoo-e-e-e!

Git UP!

The grub is on the table, boys, the coffee's on the bile:
 The swagon's hotter'n Tophet and I swear 'twill make you smile.
 There's whiskers on the gingerbread, the biskit can't be beat;
 I've got molasses sinkers made from mother's old receipt.

DRIVE, CAMP, AND WANGAN 145

— Oh, I've got molasses sinkers built around some extra holes ;
They'll make you think of home and friends and tickle up your souls.
The beans come out a-roarin' when I boosted up the lid ;
They chuckled when I pried 'em out — they laughed, I swear they did.
Don't jolly me about your smells of Araby the blest,
— Jus' take a snuff of ground-baked beans all hot from out their nest.

The grub is on the table, boys, hurroop, hurroop,
whoo-e-e-e !
Come, tumble out, git on a move! Good Lord, it's after three !
Rise up and shine, my gentle lambs, surround your breakfast quick,
Or else you'll git the sun's ha-ha from over Tumble Dick.
And if the timer heaves a growl and docks you in his book,
Jus' blame your own durn lazy luck — don't lay it on the cook.
For ev'ry man who's et my cream-of-tartar biskit knows

The cook of this 'ere camp, by smut,'s the earliest bird that crows.

For I'm old enough to spell a-a-a-ble!

The grub is all on the ta-a-a-ble!

Whoo-e-e-e!

Git UP!

OFF FOR THE LUMBER WOODS

The duffle is packed, and the babies are smacked, and the wife has a buss and a hug ;
And she's done it up brown in a-loading me down with about all the grub I can lug,
So long! Good-by!
I'm off! Don't cry!
— Just about a month of Sundays and you'll see my homely mug.

Now look ye, ye towzled-haired son of a gun,
Be good to your mother or you'll see some fun
When your daddy comes down on the drive in the spring
And fetches a withe with a hornetty sting.
Ha! ha! you young rascal, you'd rather have gum?
Well, be a good baby and pa'll fetch you some.

Yes, mother, you're right, it does seem kinder wrong
To leave you alone here the whole winter long.
And it's tough that I have to pack dunnage and break
For the big timber wrassle at Chamberlain lake.

But folks are a-waiting for lumber and boards,
They've picked up their saws, now they've laid down their swords.

They're wanting the timbers for new city domes, They're wanting the shingles for humble new homes.

The hammers are waiting, the nails are on end,
And the chorus of clatter'll commence when we send

A billion of lumber down race-way and sluice,
From the lonesome dominions of gloomy King Spruce.

The men who print papers are wanting fresh sheets,

The folks who build ships will be launching new fleets,

For, mark me, no matter what Uncle Sam planned,

He finds he can't reach his new back lots by land.

Don't smile at me, wife, but I feel when I swing
'That sweaty old axe from the fall to the spring,
'That I hear one grim cry swimming up on the air
'Through the dim, silent forest, — a pleading prayer.

'The clank of the press, and the scream of the saws,

'The grunt of the grinder that slavers and chaws

DRIVE, CAMP, AND WANGAN 149

At the fibre of pulp wood ; the purr of the plane
Are blent in one chorus, attuned to one strain,
— That sighs in the breezes or throbs in the roar
Of the tempest ; and ever the cry is for “ More.”
And we men with our axes and horn-covered palms Hear the call as a man hears the summons “ To arms,”
And forward we plunge with no quarter, no truce,
With axes a-gleam in the realms of King Spruce.

The duffle is packed, and the babies are smacked ;
now wife, for a buss and a hug.
Save a smile 'gainst the spring, for I'm going to bring just all the spruce gum I can lug.
I'm off! Good-bye!
So 'long! Don't cry!
In about a month of Sundays you will see my homely mug.

HERE'S TO THE STOUT ASH POLE

Hooray for to-day, and hooray for to-night, and forget all the rest of it, boys.

Hold on, Mister Barkeeper, close up your jaw, we're paying for all of this noise.

We won't mosey out, and we won't set down, and you can't keep a one of us still ;

You can charge, if you want to, so much for a yawp ; we'll settle all right in the bill.

For this is our very last evenin' on earth ; the last night we'll be here alive.

To-morrow at six we all cut sticks for the rear of the West Branch drive.

Hooray !

For Seboomook, and rear of the drive.

Oh, bartender, say, can't you hustle them up ?

Come, push out your reddest of paint,

We're here for to splatter the carnation on, now blow us for fools if we ain't !

So set out your varnish for coffins, my boy, — that brand called the " Grave-diggers' Boast."

I've got enough chink — now down with your drink ! and I'll give ye a riverman's toast.

While you're raising up your glasses,
Jest forget the giddy lasses

DRIVE, CAMP, AND WANGAN 151

That have coaxed away your dollars, and have given you the laugh.

Turn away from them connivers,
And as honest, hearty drivers

Drink a good, round jorum to the stout ash staff.

When the girls have filched your cash,
There is still the hearty ash,

It is waiting at Seboomook for to cheer your foolish soul.

Ah, you know we love it most; and I give you this, my toast,

The river driver's darling, oh, his long ash pole.

We've ridden the gorges on rioting logs, and we've always swept safe to the land.

So long as we rode with the spikes in our boots, and the long, limber pole in our hand;

We've pried at the jams on the brink of the dams, and the pole has stood by like a man,

And then in the dash for our lives in the crash the pole braced us up as we ran,

Hooray!

As we yelled through the smother and ran.

And when in the bellow of up-ending logs it looked like good-by to our souls

We rode back to life from out of the strife, vaulting high on the end of our poles.

Ah, these are the friends that stand by you, my boys : they're truer than all of the host Of the fair-spoken gang of the thieves of the town! Crowd up here and drink to my toast!

The girls were sweeter'n honey
Till they gathered in our money,
And the barkeeps they were pleasant just as long as we could spend.
Now it's quite another story,
— Case of throwdown! But, by glory,
We can drink this final jorum to our stout old friend.
Though the gang has swiped our cash, there is still the hearty ash,
He is waiting at Seboomook for to cheer your foolish soul.
After all, we love him most! and he's still the last, loud toast
— The driver's honest helper, oh, the long ash pole.

MISTER WHAT'S-HIS-NAME

OF SEBOOMOOK

Have you ever heard Seboomook with her April dander up,
With the amber rushing river gorged to highest drivin' pitch?
Have you heard her boom and bellow — rocky lips a-froth with yellow —
When she spews and spumes the torrents — oh, the wild and wicked witch?

She has menace in her breath,
And she roars the chant of death,
For the victim that she slavers never sees the sun again.
And she clutches at the river,
With entreaty that it give her The morsels for her longing, which are men — men — men!

Here's a tale to suit the cynic — 'tis a satire from the woods,
And concerns a certain hero who was hunting after Fame;
'Tis the grim and truthful story of a mighty reach for glory,
But, alas, he didn't get it, for we've clean forgot his name!

He was one of Murphy's crew,
And he swore that he'd go through Where no other West Branch driver ever saved the shirt he wore:
For he vowed he'd shoot the gorge
And allowed that he could dodge
The Death that knelt a-clutching at the prey the waters bore.

When they said he couldn't do it, why, he laughed the crowd to scorn, — Poled across the dimpling shallows with a fierce and hoarse good-by — He was Murphy's top-notch driver, half a bird and one-half diver,
But the best who brave Seboomook only sound the depths to die.

And they found him miles below;
But his mother would not know
The mangled mass Seboomook belched from out her vap'rous throat.
The first man coming down
Brought the story out to town, Referring to the hero as a "dretful reckless goat."

DRIVE, CAMP, AND WANGAN 155

Then he told the brisk reporters all the grim and grisly tale,
And the deed was dressed in language in a way to bring some fame.
But alas for human glory, the galoot who brought the story,
Remembered all the details, but forgot the fellow's name.

Have you ever heard Seboomook roaring at you in the night,
With her champing jaws a-frothing in a wordless howl of hate?
'Tis a fierce vociferation to compel our admiration,
For the chap who struck that rugged blow,
cross-counterered thus by Fate.

When he lunged his pole at Death,
When the river sucked his breath,
Seboomook gravely listened when he screamed his humble name;
For the honor of a foe
She would have the people know,
But she vainly dins her message in the deafened ear of Fame.

HA'NTS OF THE KINGDOM OF SPRUCE

The sheeted ghosts of moated grange
 And misty wraiths are passing strange ;
 The gibbering spooks and elfin freaks
 And cackling witches' maudlin squeaks —

— They have terrified the nations, and have laid the bravest low,
 But intimidate a woodsman up in Maine? Why, bless you, no!
 Merely misty apparitions or some sad ancestral spook
 Serve to terrify a maiden or to warn a death-marked duke.
 But the P. I. scoffs their terrors, though he'll never venture loose
 'Mongst the ha'nts that roam the woodlands in the weird domains of Spruce.
 — He'll mock the fears of mystic and he'll scorn
 the bookish tales
 Of the fearsome apparitions of the past, but courage fails
 In the night when he awakens, all a-shiver in his bunk,
 And with ear against the logging hears the steady, muffled thunk
 Of the hairy fists of monsters, beating there in grisly play,

DRIVE, CAMP, AND WANGAN 157

— Horrid things that stroll o' night-times, never,
never seen by day,
For he knows that though the spectres of the storied past are vain,
There is true and ghostly ravage in the forest depths of Maine.

For even in these days P. I.'s shake
At the great Swamp Swogon of Brassua Lake.
When it blitters and glabbers the long night through,
And shrieks for the souls of the shivering crew.
And all of us know of the witherlick
That prowls by the shore of the Cup-sup-tic.
Of the Side Hill Ranger whose eyeballs gleam
When the moon hangs gibbous over Abol
stream ;
— Of the Dolorous Demon that moans and calls
Through the mists of Abol-negassis falls.
And many a woodsman has felt his bunk Tossed by the Phantom of Sourdna-hunk.
There's the Giant Spook who ha'nted Lane's Old wangan camp and rended chains
— Great iron links of the snubbing cable —
As though they were straw— who was even able
To twist the links in a mighty mat
With which he bent the forest flat

From Nahma-kanta to Depsiconneag — Acres and acres — league after league ;
Striding abroad from peak to dale
And laying on with his mighty flail.

Oh, fie for the shade of the manored hall,
A fig for a Thing in a grave-creased pall,
— For wraiths that flitter and flutter and sigh,
With flabby limbs and the sunken eye!
The woodsman recks not ye, frail ghosts,
But he knows and he bows to the deep wood's hosts,
Who sound their coming with giant breath,
Who mark their passing with storm and death,
Who shriek through blow-downs and howl o'er lakes,
— And he hides and trembles, he shivers and shakes
When he hears the Desperate Demons loose
In the weird dominions of grim King Spruce.

THE HERO OF THE COONSKIN CAP

When the blaze leaps forth from the camp's great hearth,

And the fitful shadows come and go ;

When the ruddy beam lights the deacon-seat

And the silent faces in a row ;

As the storm-gust drags at the sighing eaves

And moans at the shuddering window-pane,

Some droning voice from a shadowy bank

Intones a song to the wind's long strain,

And like the souging, ebbing blast

The gusty chorus bursts and swells ;

And then one single, sighing voice

Drones plaintively the tale it tells.

They're simple songs, they're homely songs,

And yet they cling in heart and brain, —

Those songs of the darkling forest depths,

These songs of the lumber woods of Maine.

There's the song of home and the song of love,

And the lilt of battle, bold and free ;

There's the song of the axe in the ringing wood,

And the sighing song of the distant sea.

Yet oft when the choruses are stilled

Some honest woodsman's voice can wake

A tender thrill with the homely song

Of a nameless hero of Moosehead Lake.

A hero in leggings, he volunteered
— When the treacherous ice lay black as loam
In the melting spring — to risk his life
And bring to others the news from home.
He bore the mail for the lumber camp,
The missives for many an anxious man
Who toiled for the ones he loved so well,
In the wilds of the far Socatean.
He'd fingered each as he studied the names
And sorted the letters with kindly care ;
While with honest heart of a friend he guessed
At the news that the precious notes might bear.

There was one for Kane, and the last had said
That his little girl was sorely ill —
Poor man, he had worried the whole long week!
— And here was one for the Bluenose-Will,
Who had left a sweetheart to come to Maine,
And had looked for a line in a homesick way ;
And here were a couple from Henry's wife,
— And one bore "Forward without delay!"
A tiny message to "Pa John Booth"
Had a cross to show where a rousing smack
Had been pressed on the paper ; and here, alas,
Was a letter fringed with a sombre black.
Freighted with sorrow or bringing the smiles,
Fresh from the homes so far away,

DRIVE, CAMP, AND WANGAN 161

He tucked them all in his coon-skin cap
And breasted the sleet of the dreary day.
No one knew how it came about,
No man witnessed the fight for breath,
When the cruel clutch of the great black lake
Reached up and dragged him down to death.

But we always knew that his fiercest strength
Was spent in the supreme flash of life
When he, poor wanderer, thought alone
Of the news for others from home and wife.
For, as far on the edge of the broken ice
As his arm could reach, when he sank and died,
We found the worn old coon-skin cap
With the letters carefully tucked inside.

A HAIL TO THE HUNTER

Oh, we're getting under cover, for the "sport" is on the way,
— Pockets bulge with ammunition, and he's coming down to slay ;
All his cartridges are loaded and his trigger's on the "half,"
And he'll bore the thing that rustles, from a deer to Jersey calf.
He will shoot the foaming rapids, and he'll shoot the yearling bull.
And the farmer in the bushes — why, he'll fairly get pumped full.
For the gunner is in earnest, he is coming down to kill,
— Shoot you first and then inquire if he hurt
you — yes, he will !
For the average city feller he has big game on the brain,
And imagines in October there is nothing else in Maine !
Therefore some absorbed old farmer cutting corn or pulling beans
Gets most mightily astonished with a bullet in his jeans.
So, O neighbor, scoot for cover or get out your armor plate,

DRIVE, CAMP, AND WANGAN 163

— Johnnie's got his little rifle and is swooping on the State.

Oh, we're learning, yes, we're learning, and I'll warn you now, my son,

If you really mean to bore us you must bring a bigger gun.

For the farmers have decided they will take no further chance,

And progressive country merchants carry armor-plated pants ;

— Carry shirts of chain-plate metal, lines of coats
all bullet-proof,

And the helmets they are selling beat a Knight of Malta's " roof."

So I reckon that the farmers can proceed to get their crops,

Yes, and chuckle while the bullet raps their trouser seats and stops ;

And the hissing double-B shot as they criss-cross over Maine

Will excite no more attention than the patter of the rain.

And the calf will fly a signal and the Jersey
- bull a sign,

And the horse a painted banner, reading " Hoss ;
Don't Shoot ; He's Mine ! "

And every fowl who wanders from the safety of the pen

Will be taught to cackle shrilly, "Please don't plug me; I'm a hen."

Now with all these due precautions we are ready for the gang,

We'll endure the harmless tumult of the rifles'
crack and bang,

For we're glad to have you with us — shoot the landscape full of holes;

We will back our brand-new armor for to save our precious souls.

O you feller in the city, those 'ere woods is full of fun,

We've got on our iron trousers — so come up and bring your gun!

HOSSES

THEM OLD RAZOOS AT TOPSHAM TRACK

Won't you poke your buzzin' stop-watch,
Daddy Time, and click 'er back To the days of spider high-wheels on the dinky Topsham track?
When they raced there in October for pertaters, corn, and oats —
Sometimes paid the purse in shotes —
Drivers wore their buff'ler coats,
And the weather was so juicy that the boys would take a vote
As to which would drag the better, suh, a sulky or a boat.
Still 'twas fun, when the sun
Got the moppin' bus'ness done,
And the field went off a-skatin', half the pelters on the run.
There was 'Liza, Old Keturah Ann, and Doughnut Boy and Pat,
Their pedigrees was barnyard, but we didn't care for that;
So hooray! So hooroo! Oh, ye ought to see
'em climb,
They was racers, suh, from 'way back — but no matter 'bout the time!
There was goers in that pack —
Look at Toggle-jointed Jack

With an action like a windmill, but the critter he could rack!

And I'd like to have him back,

For I tell you, bub, I stack

On the high-wheel, razoo-races of the good old Topsham track.

Oh, you oughter seen the send-offs, and you oughter seen the tricks!

For the stretch was chock-a-blocko when they scored 'em down by six.

And the starter he would whang-o on a dented strip of tin,

But the drivers never minded 'less he cussed the gang like sin.

The hoss-whips that they carried reached away
beyond the manes,

And they larruped 'em with chains —

Tried to lift 'em by the reins.

'Twas muscle, suh, that won the race in them old days — not brains!

And you'd think to see the sawin' and the jerkin' and the h'ists,

The boys they was a-usin' partent webbin's made of j'ists.

Their elbows flapped like flyin' and they yowwowed through the dust,

And 'twarn't through lack of hollerin' that ev'ry man warn't fust.

'Twas "Hi-i yah, cut the corners!" and "Hi-i yoop, take the pole!"

"Don't ye keep me in this pocket — let me out there, darn yer soul!"

"Gimme room there! don't ye pinch me or I'll bust yer blasted wheel!"

"Hi, you sucker, that's a steal!"

"That's a low-down trick, to squeal!"

"Oh, ye want some trouble, do ye? Wal, con-sarn yer harslet, peel!"

It was tetchy, mister, tetchy, to go sassin' on 'em back,

When the crowd got interested at the good old Topsham track.

There was Savage — Solly Savage — drivin' Adeline Success —

He had speed to sell at auction, but they bribed the cuss, I guess —

For he pulled her tight and good —

Pulled her settin' — then he stood.

Jest got up and braced his feet, suh, and he pulled her all he could.

But the blamed old mare was fussy, wasn't posted on the deal,

H'isted up her skeeter-duster and let out one mighty squeal.

She was leadin' of 'em easy on the back stretch at the turn,

And there wasn't no mistakin' that the race and heat were her'n.

Ginger, ginger! She could go!

When she didn't stub her toe,

Warn't a horse in all the county stood a show suh, stood a show!

Sol was madder'n snakes in hayin' — had a string of catnip fits,

Just unfastened both the traces and she hauled him by the bits.

And that rank old Adeline

She come snortin' 'crost the line

Least a dozen lengths a leader, and they soaked old Sol a fine.

Then the feller that had bribed him played tattoo on Solly's face,

And took back the dollar-fifty that he'd give him for the race;

But the boys they licked the feller. Solly got his money back,

For we stood for honest dealing at the good old Topsham track.

Now come join me, all old timers, — hip, hooray and tiger, too!

For the high-wheel days at Topsham and the good old-time razoo —

For the days of spider sulkies and the days of solid fun,

When we had a dozen knock-downs 'fore the race could be begun ;

When 'twas "Huddup, Uncle Eli," and "H' along there, John, or bust ;"

And the man that finished fust,
Though he argued and he cussed,

Might not always get decisions — 'twas accordin'
to the dust ;

And 'twas therefore kind of needful, suh, right after ev'ry heat,

To have another fight or so to settle who had beat ;

But they never left a grudge,
Even when they licked the judge.

And we wasn't all teetotal, still we went it light on "budge,"

For we never took no stronger than some good
New England rum —

Jest a mild and pleasant bev'rage — why, the deacons they took some !

Then there wasn't pedigrees,

And no chin-kerbumping knees,

And an av'rage field would manage jest to keep ahead the breeze.

But come join me, ye old-timers, in this pledge and one hurrah,

For the spanking, wide-hoofed pelters of the old days of "Hi yah-h-h,"

For a feller kinder feels That he'd go without his meals Jest to hear some more kiwhoopin' from the old-time trottin' spiels.
When the wind was in the drivers — nowadays it's in the wheels.
When the tang was in the weather on those autumn afternoons,
And the band got kind of dreamy in those good old-fashioned tunes.
Oh, 'twas awful good to set there on the sunny side the stand,
And to have your girl a-smilin' and a-snugglin',
hand in hand ;
And to hear her, when you mentioned getting started pretty soon, Whisper, blushin', "What's the hurry? There will be a lovely moon!"
Ah, there's moisture on my eyelids and my voice is gettin' hoarse.
But 'tis prob'ly jest the mem'ry of the dust of that old course.
Oh, Daddy Time, if somehow you could only click your watch
And let a feller start again a race he's made a botch,
I wouldn't ask no better place to start my life anew

“With my arm behind her back, and a hidden, bashful smack
To sweeten all the pop-corn balls we munched at Topsham track.”

Than on that stand that afternoon beside that girl I knew,
With my arm behind her back,
And a hidden, bashful smack
To sweeten all the popcorn balls we munched at Topsham track.

TO HIM WHO DRIV' THE STAGE

Here's a lyric for the man who's "druv' the stage,"

For the hero of the webbin's and the whip;
Who has faced the wind and weather, fingers calloused by the leather,
And in twenty years has never lost a trip.

Here's a tribute to the sway-back, spotted hoss,
Who has struggled up the stony, gullied hills;
And his dorsal corrugations show the nature of his rations,
— When he stops, he has to lean against the thills.

Here's obituary notice of the stage,
Chief of hopeless and dilapidated wrecks;
With the cracked enamel awning, and its cushions ripped and yawning,
And the body bumping down upon the "ex."

Here's alas and oh, the ancient "buff'ler robe,"
With the baldness of a golden-wedding groom;
When the rain and snow descended, then some wondrous smells were blended,
Till the stage was scented very like a tomb.

Here's a word for all the weary miles he ploughed,
When the drifts had piled the stage-road mountain high,
When the night shut down around him and the north wind sought and found him,
And the tempest chilled his blood and blurred his eye.

There were only country letters in the bags,
And the bags were lank, and yet his word was
"Must."

And he felt as if the nation knew his fierce determination
That he'd have the mail sacks through on time or bust.

Here's rebuke to those contractors who have skinned
The stipends of our Uncle Sam's star routes, Till the men who drive the stages hardly get enough in wages
To keep their little shavers' feet in boots.

Here's a lyric, then, for him who drives the stage ;
When you ride behind his ragged back, don't frown,
But endure the bang and slamming, for the man who's earned the damning
Is the contract-sharp who bid the wages down.

HE BACKED A BLAMED OLD HORSE

The neighbors came a-nosing 'round and said the horse could trot

— He oughter up and killed him then, right
there upon the spot;

A-killed him, yas, and tanned his hide and made it into boots,

Then worn 'em out a-kicking 'round them neigh-borly galoots

Who set the bee to buzzing under Ezry Booker's hat,

And filled him up and chucked him full of nonsense such as that

He'd got a hoss 'twas bound to make his everlasting pile,

And what he got to do, of course, was handle
him in style;

That he must bandage up his legs and figger on his feed,

And give him reg'lar exercise and work him out for speed.

His knees, his neck, his breast, his thighs, the way he lugged his head,

And all his other symptoms looked to "speed,"
the neighbors said.

So Ezry he just sucked it in, as child-like as could be,

— It cost him thirteen dollars to look up the pedigree.
Then one day down to Laneses store he ribbled off a mess
Of names that struck your Uncle Dud as so much foolishness.
“ I’ve traced him back,” so Ezry said, “ to Morgan blood ’nd Drew,”
To what’s-his-name and this and that, and which and t’other, too.
And Ezry banged the counter, just excited as could be,
A-arguing out the knots and kinks in that there pedigree.
Land sakes! He couldn’t seem to think of nothing but that plug:
— Neglected work, let slide his farm, went crazy as a bug.
But there! The neighbors stood around and said to go ahead,
And Ezra like a blamed old fool just swallowed all they said.
Ef they’d turned to and burned his barn ’twould been a prison crime,
But ’twould have been a better thing for Ezry ev’ry time.
He could have got insurance then, but ’twas a total loss

When they torched Ezry up to back
A Blamed
Old
Hoss!

Of course he had to put that horse in some good trainer's hands,
And trainers, as the man who's tried deereckly understands,
Ain't driving just to take the air, for scenery or for health,
But sort of grab a feller's leg and milk him for his wealth.
And there were blankets, straps, and girths, and bandages and boots ; Pnomatic sulkies, pads, and shoes, and hoods and stable suits ;
And lotions, too, and liniments — the best of hay and oats,
And Lord knows what of this and that for trotters' backs and throats !
Then came the entrance fees, of course, and travelling expense,
For Ezry lugged that trotter round, and didn't have the sense
To know when he was fairly licked, but always would persist
That " that air hoss another year is going in the list ! "

The trainer said he'd have him there ; the neighbors thought so, too ;

So Ezry pulled his pocketbook and said he'd see him through.

So 'round the circuit went the hoss and, though 'tis sad to tell,

“The Flying Dutchman ” didn't fly — he never got a smell.

And when he'd come a-puffing in behind the whole blamed crowd

Then Ezry swore and shook his fist, and argued 'round, and vowed

That all the rest was down on him and had, without a doubt,

Just pooled together in a scheme to shut The Dutchman out.

The driver said so, anyway, and then, you know, a few

Good neighbors took him out one side and said they thought so too.

And so — but land, it's plain enough how Ezry's money went

— He wound up his race-hoss career without a blasted cent.

What's more, he ain't the only one who's sunk his little pot

In fubbing 'round from track to track with horses that can't trot.

— He ain't the only man in Maine whose everlasting curse
Has been some darn-fool neighbors, and his itch to win a purse.
And, as I've said, if they'd turned to, and burnt his barn instead
Of cracking up that hoss so much and turning Ezry's head,
He could have got insurance then, but 'twas a total loss
When they torched Ezry up to back
A Blamed
Old
Hoss!

B. BROWN — HOSS ORATOR

I've heerd of Demosthenes — b'longed down in Greece,

— And Cicero, too!

But 'course, never knew

A great deal about 'em except through my niece,
Who's tended the 'cademy, — lets on to know

'Bout most of the critters who lived years ago,
— Who'd talk to a standstill the chaps of their day

With a broadside of words like a gatling, they say.

And folks knuckle down, and praise up, and kow-tow

To those hefty old tongue-lashing chaps even now.

So I'm ready for brickbats, and hollers, and howls,
From the folks of the schools, and from hide-bound old owls,

When I shin the high flag-staff of Fame to tear down

All colors that flop there for rival renown,
And string up the banner of Bennington Brown.

Don't think I'll assert

What he knew ever hurt!

He was mostly considered an ornery squirt.

He traded old hosses, and cattle, and such,
 And the sayin' 'round town was: "Oh, Brown,
 he ain't much!"

But I read t'other day, in a volyum called "Hints,"

That a speaker is gauged by his gifts to convince.
 So I stand on that statement and solemnly swear
 That as a star-actor convincer, I'd dare Back Bennington Brown up against the best man

That ever tongue wrassled, grab holts, catch as can.

Give Cicero Pointer, Directum, or Hanks,
 And Brown an old pelter with wobbly shanks,
 — Just leave 'em an hour, no odds, a clear field,
 No matter how Cicero sputtered and spieled,
 I'll bet he would find himself talked to a stop,
 And Brown would unload the old rip, even swap!

I can see how he'd look
 When he carefully took Old Cic by the gallus with "come-along" hook Of that gnurly forefinger. And there Cic would stand,
 For he wouldn't be yankin' away from that hand,
 Unless in his desperate efforts to skip Cic dodged from his toga, and gave Brown the slip.

And it's likely that Brown would talk something like this :

“ I ain't at all anxious to shift with you, Cic.
Your hoss, I'll admit, has got plenty of speed, But you know, Cic, you know that he ain't what you need.

Outside of a show piece to stand in the barn,
That hoss he ain't worth, Cic, a tinker's gol-darn.

What you want is that hoss of mine — want him blame bad,

He don't need no whip, crackers, cudgel, or gad.
'Thout strap, boot, or toeweights, he's gone out and showed

His quarters in thirty. He stands lots of road,
And I swow I dunno what I'm sellin' him for,
— I need him myself. But I'll sell! Have a chaw?

And as I was sayin', he's just what you want; —
Oh, yes, have to own he's a leetle dite gaunt!

Been a-drivin' him hard, for he'll stand lots of work,

Never had a sick day, never shows the least quirk.

He's young: look yourself; jest you roll up his lip;

By the way, ever smile? I've some stuff on my hip.

Now as I was sayin' — and on, and so on,
Till Cicero'd put his suspenders in pawn,
Hand over his steed for a wind-broken brute,
And sling in some golden sestertia to boot.

I tell you again,
That of all of the men Who can slat the King's English, I swear by old Ben!

And you'll never appreciate half of my praise Till you've stood there yourself in the beller and blaze

Of his thirteen-inch barker, and fust thing you know

Discover you've bought an old bone yard or so,
I hardly expect, O ye hurrying throng,
Ye'll bow to my hero, applaud my rude song,
But sling, if ye will, all your bouquets and praise
At the cut-and-dried speakers of pod-auger days,
I'll go by myself and I'll tenderly crown
With bay the bald brows of old Bennington, Brown.

"JEST A LIFT"

Feller was far as the foot of the hill in one of those boggy places,
Had a first-class team,
As strong as a beam,
But the feller had busted his traces ;
And the feller gave up when he saw he was stuck.

He borrowed a chaw and consarned his luck,
— Admitted he didn't know what to do ;
Sat down on a bank and looked so blue
He worried the people that passed, and they Just turned their noses the other way.
Old Ammi Simmons muttered that he Was a dite afraid of his whiffle-tree ;
It was slivered some, "and there warn't much doubt

'Twould bust if he pulled that feller out."
And Ira Dorsey, regretful and smug,
Would have helped had he brought his heavier tug,
So he simply beamed a bright "good day"
And clucked to his team and rode away.
So thus they passed for an hour or two ;
Many not noticing, while a few Assured him they'd like to help him out
"If the rigging they had was only stout."

Feller had thought he was up a stump, when along drove Ivory Keller;
 Saw the sunken hub,
 Yelled, "What's the troub?
Don't ye want a lift there, feller?"
And the feller said that he did, you bet,
But said he had begged while he'd set and set,
And he hadn't discovered a single man
Who'd give him a boost with an extra span.
"Why," Ivory said, "that's jest my holt.
That off hoss there ain't more'n a colt,
And it's hardly an extry pulling pair,
But it's yourn for what it's worth, I swear.
For I've got a home-made sort of a rule
— Won't kick a cripple nor sass a fool,
And when I find that a feller's stuck
— A side-tracked chap down on his luck —
Why, bless you, neighbor, in jest about
Two shakes of a sheep's tail I yank him out."
And the very next thing that the feller knew Old Ivory busted a chain or two,
But the horse and the colt and the gay old man
Bent to the job till the clogged wheels ran, — Tugged and buckled with hearty will Till the cart rolled over the tough old hill.
Then the feller begged him to take some pay,
But the old man chuckled and shoved him
 away;

“ Why, bub, see here,” said Ivory Keller,
“ I’m a tollable busy son of a gun,
And this is the way I squeeze in fun,
— Grab in same’s this and help a feller.”

BART OF BRIGHTON

'Tis the tale of Bart of Brighton — meaning Brighton up in Maine ;
 It's the tale of Uncle Bart, sir, and his rackergaited mare ;
 I have toned it down a little where the language
 was profane,
 But the rest is as he told it — this remarkable affair.
 It is very wrong to swear ;
 Bart admits the fact — but there !
 Times occur when human nature simply is obliged to “r'ar.”

“It's all along o' givin' lifts to Uncle Isr'el Clark,
 — His folks don't like him stubbin' round the village after dark, —
 And old Mis' Clark has asked of folks that see him on the road
 To take him in and bring him home, if 'tain't too much a load.
 The day this 'ere affair come off I'd took in Uncle Pease,
 With a pail of new molasses that he hugged between his knees.
 We see old Clark ahead of us, a-lugging home a gun.

Says I to Pease, 'Now brace yer hat: we'll have a leetle fun.'

'Set in behind, old Clark,' I says. 'Hop in behind,' says I.

'Prowidin' these 'ere tugs don't bust I'll take you like a fly.'

He piled aboard, s'r, master quick, there warn't
no need to tease,

And there he sot, the gun straight up, the butt between his knees.

"I'll tell you 'bout that mare of mine — the more you holler 'whoa,'

I've larnt the whelp to clench her teeth, and h'ist her tail — and go!

And when we got clus' down to Clark's I thought for jest a sell

I'd make believe we'd run away. So I commenced to yell,

And old man Pease he hugged his knees and gaffled to his pail.

And now, my boy, purraps you think that turnout didn't sail!

He hugged his gun, did Uncle Clark, and set and hollered 'Oh!'

While I kep' nudgin' Uncle Pease and bellered,
'Durn ye, whoa!'

“I larfed, suh, like a lunytick, I larfed and thought 'twas fun
To look around and see old Clark a-hangin' to his gun,
For he was scart plum nigh to death, and so was Uncle Pease,
Who doubled clus' above that pail he clenched
between his knees.
But while I larfed I clean forgot the Jackson
corderoy,
And when we struck that on the run, we got our h'ist, my boy.
Old Clark went up jest like a ball and, next the critter knowed,
Come whizzlin' down, s'r, gun and all, starn-fust there in the road.
And when the gun-butt struck the ground, kerwhango, off she went,
— Both barrels of her, all to onct, and then — wal, 'twas — hell-bent!
The off-rein bust, the wheels r'ared up — the old mare give a heave,
That runaway was on for sure — there warn't
no make-believe;
With t'other rein I geed the mare up-hill to'ards Clarkses yard,
— We struck the doorstep, struck her fair, and struck her mighty hard!

And long as Lord shall give me breath I shan't forget the eye

That old Aunt Clark shot out at me as we went whoopin' by.

Then I went out and Pease went out and things got kinder blue

— 'Twas sev'ral minits by the clock 'fore this old cock come to.

And there the old mare'd climbed the fence and stood inside the gate,

With eyes stuck out and ears stuck back and head and tail up straight.

And from the way she looked at me 'twas master evident

She wasn't catchin' on to what this celebration meant.

And I was clutchin' jest about two feet of one
the reins,

While Uncle Pease was dodderin' round, a-yellin'
'Blood and brains!'

For, bless my soul, when he had lit he'd run himself head-fust

Right down in that molasses pail; — he thought his head had bust!

And that the stuff a-runnin' down and gobbled acrost his face

Was quarts of gore, and so old Pease had clean give up his case.

And there he stood like some old hen a-drippin'
 in the rain,
 And hollered stiddy, 'Blood and brain, I'm dead; oh, blood and brain!'
 Old Uncle Clark was on his back, a-listening to the fuss,
 And wonderin' whuther that old gun had murdered him or us.

"Now that's the way the thing come off. Best is," concluded Bart,
 "They warn't nobody hurt a mite: three-fifty fixed the cart."
 But as he spoke he sought to hide a poultice with his hat
 And curtly said, "Oh, jest a tunk! you see, Aunt Clark done that."

'Tis the tale of Bart of Brighton—meaning Brighton up in Maine,
 — It's the tale of Uncle Bart, sir, and his racker-gaited mare;
 I have toned it down a little where the language
 was profane,
 But the rest is as he told it, this remarkable affair.

GOIN' T' SCHOOL

THE PAIL I LUGGED TO SCHOOL

I know my confession is homely, but Yankees are Yankees clean through,
Their dollars make shells like a turtle's, but their hearts, my dear fellow, are true To the dear, sacred days of their childhood, and luxury loses its charm:
— The only good things are the old things to the fellow brought up on the farm.
And I'd trade all the cheer of a banquet, I'd “swop” them, as grandpap would say,
For the tang of the infinite gusto that came to me, when, after play,
I lifted the battered tin cover and squared my brown arms to assail
The grub that this hearty young shaver had carried to school in his pail.

God bless her, that darling old mother! She cherished the honest conceit
That the groundwork of boyish good morals is,
first of all, plenty to eat.
And though I went barefoot in summer, with trousers cut over from Jim's, We scampered to school every morning with dinner pails filled to their brims.

There were doughnuts, both holed ones and twisters, and always a bottle of cream,
And jell cakes and tarts and all such like — oh,
how the kids' eyes used to gleam !
I pitied the poor little shavers who slunk to a corner to eat,
Who brought only bread and potatoes and never had anything sweet ;
And some carried grub in their pockets, and hid with a child's bitter shame
To choke down the crust and the cooky before some rude fun-maker came.
But out of such manhood's successes of which I've a right to be proud There never was one I've uncovered, with such a delight, to the crowd
As that pail with its bountiful dinner, each cake and each jelly-tipped tart
A dumb but an eloquent voucher of a thoughtful and true mother-heart.
And, neighbors, from things I have noted, I think it's a pretty good rule To size up a mother's devotion by the grub her child carries to school.
Those savors that float from my childhood dull
all the delights of my board ;
The good things from mother's old kitchen my dollars can never afford,

And I'd trade all these delicate dishes — a clean unconditional sale —
For the tang of the infinite gusto from the depths of that old dinner pail.

THE PADDYWHACKS

Mother says it's something fearful — way this pesky young one acts,
And she's called the Johnson children by the name of "Paddywhacks."
And she keeps a-givin' orders that I musn't have
'em round;
But she thinks that Satan's in me, for she says
I'm always bound
To go mixing with 'em somehow when she lets me out to play;
And you bet I'm going to see 'em if I have to run away.

I'll never wear them blamed dude clothes
Nor boots with patent leather toes.
I like to stomp and scuff and kick
And holler round. It makes me sick
To have that Reynolds youngster call,
He's primped up like a big wax doll.
My mother says he's just too sweet,
He always keeps his clothes so neat,
And wishes I'd spruce up a bit.
What! Look like that? Well, I guess nit!
— They've dirty mugs and ragged backs,
But just give me them Paddywhacks.

They can catch ye lots of suckers — know the brook and shortest cut ;

They have got a robber's dungeon and a nice browse Injun hut.

They can scrape ye lots of slyver — juicy stuff
from little pines,

They can make a willow whistle, and they're posted on the signs

Of woodchucks, coons, and squirrels ; and they own a brindle houn',

And they get to going barefoot first of any boys in town.

That's the stuff — oh, that's the stuff,

Let a kid kick up and scuff !

Not go round with mouth all screwed

Goody, like that Reynolds dude.

Say, I'll push him once, if he Comes a-making mouths at me.

Yah, yah ! See them corkscrew curls !

That's right, let him play with girls.

Let him wear his ruffled shirt

— Give me one that won't show dirt.

I'm the chap, you bet, that stacks

Up 'long-side them Paddywhacks.

THAT MAYBASKET FOR MABEL FRY

Mother rigged the little basket, for I'd teased a day or so,

— I was just a little shaver, and 'twas years and years ago, —

And I blushed while I was teasing; I was young,
so mother said,

To be running 'round with baskets when I ought to be in bed.

But she trimmed me up the basket and she asked me whom 'twas for;

Ah, I didn't dare to tell her; thought I'd better hold my jaw,

For I wanted it for Mabel, not for Minnie on the Hill;

— For a maid in rags and tatters, not a maid in lace and frill.

Minnie rode behind her ponies; Mabel had a wooden cart,

But to Mabel went the homage of my foolish boyish heart.

True, her gown was frayed and ragged, and her folks were sort of low,

And her brothers swore like demons, and they tagged where'er we'd go,

And my father always scolded me and drove them all away

“ And the dearest affection the heart can hold
Is the honest love of a five-year-old.”

Whene'er they followed Mabel if I asked her up to play.

But I saw not Mabel's tatters; for I loved her sun-browned face,

And I'd lick the kid that didn't say she was the handsomest girl in the place.

'Tis a tricky prank that memory plays

Taking me back to those early days;

But the purest affection the heart can hold

Is the honest love of a nine-year-old.

It isn't checked by the five-barred gate

Of worldly prudence and real estate.

And that, my friend, was the reason why

I hung my basket to Mabel Fry,

She'd a tattered dress, and a pink great toe

Stuck out through her shoe, but — I loved her so — .

Though that was years and years ago.

I sat down and looked at mother while she trimmed the pasteboard box,

While she crimped the crinkly paper till it fluffed like curly locks;

Till she fastened on the streamers, red and yellow, white and blue,

And she held it up and twirled it, saying, "Sonny, will that do?"

Would it do? It was a beauty! 'Twas a gem in basket art;
And I piled it full of candy, put on top a big red heart.
Then as soon as dusk could hide me I escaped
my mother's eyes,
And I hung the grand creation on the door-latch of the Frys.
How my youthful limbs were shaking! how my dizzy noddle rocked!
And my heart was pounding louder than my knuckles when I knocked.
So she caught me at the corner, for you see I didn't fly,
— Might have been I was so frightened; then perhaps I didn't try.
When I swung around to meet her, neither of us dared to stir.
Mabel stood and watched the sidewalk and I stood and gawked at her, While those little imps of brothers gobbled every blessed mite
Of the candy in that basket — Mabel didn't get a bite.
But I saved the little basket, gave each kid a hearty cuff,
And I tried to comfort Mabel; told her she was sweet enough,

— Said she didn't need the candy; but my little Mabel sighed,
Blushed and whispered that she wondered how I knew — I hadn't tried —
To-day — to-day from a long-gone May
This tricky memory strays my way.
Just for a moment I close my eyes
And see that cracked old door of Fry's.
And my heart is brushed, as the noon day
 trees
Are touched with the whisp of the strolling breeze.
Alas, that the heart mayn't always hold
The honest love of the nine-year-old.
I haven't a doubt you're dreaming now
Of some frank maid with an honest brow
Who chose you out for she loved you so,
When Worth got "Yes," and Wealth got
 "No."
But that was years and years ago.

THE MYSTIC BAND

I've joined the orders that came our way,
— Been sort of a "jiner," as one would say, —
And I've bucked the goat, and trudged the sands,
And taken the oaths in most secret bands,
Till now at last I seldom slip
On test or password, sign or grip.
And every day when I walk the street
I give the signs to the men I meet.
There's the S. of T. and the K. of P.
And the League of the Order of Liberty;
Masons and Odd Fellows string along,
Thicker than flies in the moving throng.
Till it seems that every fellow could Give you a sign of a brotherhood.
Oh, I like to meet them, every one,
From the Daughter of Peace to a Son of a Gun.
But I can't quite feel the same delight
As I used to when, some summer night,
I'd take a few of the high degrees
In the O. K. K. B. W. P's.

We had no lodge-room with locks and bars
— Our hall was the dome 'neath the winking stars ;
No lofty dais and tufted throne,
No crown or symbol or altar stone,

No velvet carpets or flashing lights
Were needed there in those old-time rites ;
There was only the light from some honest eyes
Up-raised to the velvet evening skies ;
And the only crown was the flower wreath
Set light on the curling locks beneath,
And the mystic grip was the tender squeeze
Of our hands as we roamed past the orchard
trees ;

And the head of the lodge was an elfin chap
With roses heaped in his dimpled lap.

— With wings a-spread and his locks a-blow,

And the wand of his office a silver bow.

He welcomed the timid neophytes.

And into the hearts of his pure delights

He led each happy candidate

Who breathed Love's password at the gate,

And happy he who sought degrees

In the O. K. K. B. W. P's.

'Tis just a page from the dear conceit

That makes the volume of school life sweet ;

— A bit of a jest from the callow days

When we bashfully trudged the self-same ways

As the girls from the evening meeting took,

And we carried their capes and the singing-book.

— Sauntered along the dim old lanes

With chirrup and chatter and gay refrains,

Shouting " Good-nights " as here and there,
Pausing by gate or stile, a pair
Loitered a bit on the threshold's stone
For a sweet and fond good-night of their own.
It irks me, friend, that I must profane
The oath of the order and voice that chain
Of mystic letters : yet 'twere not kind
To take you thus far and leave you blind.

And I'll whisper, you know, just heart to heart,
'Twas " One Kind Kiss Before We Part,"
The mystic grip was a warm hand-press,
The sign and the test a swift caress,
And the dearest and sweetest of Used-to-be's
Were the O. K. K. B. W. P's.

AT THE OLD "GOOL"

"Ten, ten and a double ten, forty-five and then fifteen!"

Stand you here, old friend of mine, close your eyes the while you lean

Your silvered hair against the wood that's silvered too, by sun and rain,

— The butt of storms as well as we, — old aliens crawling back to Maine.

The driving sleet, the drifting snows have filched away the vivid red

That matched, as I remember it, the flaming top-knot on your head.

And this — so gaunt, so bent, so small — it seems, alas, a wooden ghost

Of what it was when it was "gool": the school-house's old red hitching-post!

And ah, old friend, to lean your brow upon its crest you have to stoop;

— You had to stretch to reach its top in those old days of hide-and-coop.

"Ten, ten and a double ten,"

That's the way we counted then;

— Counted hundreds rapidly,

Begged the happy days to flee.

Moments were not precious then.

What we hoard to-day as men,

Then we flung in careless way ;
 Counting life as when at play ;
 "Blinding" at the old red post,
 We strove to see who'd count the most.
 "Forty-five and then fifteen, —"
 Lavish then : ah, now we glean
 On our bended knees as men
 What we flung uncounted then.
 Friend, old friend, the past troops back
 With all its smiles and all its sighs,
 When I was "It,"
 And the world was lit
 By the star-shine of two soft brown eyes.

"Ten, ten, and a double ten, forty-five and then fifteen!"
 That talisman of boyhood days has brought a sorrow that is keen.
 And yet there's joy along with pain ; let me bow
 my head here too,
 And here with brow upon this wood I'll tell you what you never knew.
 You've asked me many times, old friend, the secret of an unwed life ;
 I'll tell you now : I loved but once ; that girl loved you ; she was your wife.
 I loved her in those boyhood days, but in Life's game of counting out

Fate's happy finger stretched to you, and I—poor awkward, bashful lout—Just stepped aside. But 'twas all right! I'm not the sort to curse and whine, My joy has been that she was yours, so long as she could not be mine.
— My joy, old friend, is now to say, as here we clasp this worn old post,
There is no heart-burn in my past, no shimmer of a jealous ghost.
For boyhood's lesson taught me this: 'Tis only some egregious fool
Who rails at Fate and storms the skies because some better man "tags gool." I've been content to stand there, friend, while one by one the eager troop Of boyhood's chums have won their goal in Life's more earnest hide-and-coop.
Thank God, old chum, we still clasp hands and pledge again our boyhood ties.
 Though I've been "It,"
 And your world is lit
By the star-shine of her soft brown eyes.

LIBRARY OF CONGRESS

0 009 153 164 1 ●